Russia Starts New Dispute at San Francisco Conference

PROTEST MAY PUT OFF CLOSE BEYOND JUNE 23

Truman Visit Then Already Planned

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., June 15.—Russia threw another monkey wrench into the machinery of the world security conference tonight just when arrangements had been made for President Truman to address the closing session of the 50 nation convention on June 23d.

[President Truman will go to Berlin for Big Three meeting. Page 7.]

The Russians lodged objections to the great powers being conferred on the prospective new world peace league's general assembly.

Wants Modification

Russian Ambassador Gromyko informed State Secretary Stettinius, British Ambassador Halifax and Chinese Ambassador Koo he had been instructed to move for a modification of the power of the general assembly to discuss any matter pertaining to international relations and thereby become in Sen. Vandenberg's phrase the "town meeting" of the world.

Gromyko said the soviet union's complaint is that the conference has gone far beyond the Dumbarton Oaks plan which would have limited the jurisdiction on the assembly to matters affecting international security.

If the present arrangement stands, said Gromyko, the peace enforcing security council of 11 members will be subordinated to the assembly.

Received Coldly

Gromyko's protest was coldly received by Stettinius, Halifax, and Koo at a moment when a delay occasioned by the soviet move might upset the plans for concluding the conference in another week.

The conference leaders were in a huddle tonight on the new crisis. It was expected that a meeting of the Big Five would be called tomorrow to consider it.

There was another outburst of the warfare between the big powers and the little nations in a conference committee this afternoon. Under consideration was the proposal to call another world conference 5 to 10 years hence to revise the peace league's constitution.

France Deserts Big 5

The small countries are demanding such an opportunity to amend the charter being written here and they feel very deeply about it. They were steamrollered by the Big Five powers—the United States, Great Britain, Russia, France, and China—when the small nations fought the big power veto. When the Big Five threatened to walk out of the peace league unless a great power had the privilege to veto peace enforcement measures the little countries surrendered rather than take the blame for scrapping the peace league.

Now the small nations are demanding a chance to abolish the veto some time in the future thru amendment of the charter. On two votes in the committee the little countries had a majority and France, deserting the other four big powers, joined them. But they

House Probers Begin Study of Loan to Elliott

BY WALTER TROHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 15—The house ways and means committee today began an investigation of the $200,000 loan made in 1939 to Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the late President, by John Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company. The loan was settled in 1942 for $4,000.

Rep. Doughton [D., N. C.], committee chairman, directed Colin Stam, counsel for the house group, to investigate the income tax return of the chain store magnate for 1942, which reportedly listed $196,000 of the loan as a "bad debt."

The house committee action came as Rep. Shafer called the attention of his colleagues to provisions of the army's official manual for courts martial for cashiering officers who fail to pay their just debts.

Asks "Complete Explanation"

As Shafer cited excerpts of the manual, Rep. Knutson [R., Minn.] asked for a "complete explanation of the loan." Knutson suggested Elliott and Hartford be called before the house ways and means committee to tell about the loan.

Shafer said he had no wish at this time to denounce "black market finances" in the White House, but asked that members of the house and senate study the war department's manual, which discusses the article of war that provides any officer "convicted of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman shall be dismissed from the service."

Dishonorable Neglect

The manual explains that instances of violation of this article include "dishonorable neglect to pay debts." Shafer also quoted from the manual:

"The conduct contemplated is action or behavior in an official capacity, which in dishonoring or disgracing the individual as an officer, seriously compromises his character and standing as a gentleman for action or behavior in an unofficial or private capacity, which in dishonoring or disgracing the individual personally as a gentleman seriously compromises his position as an officer and exhibits him as morally unworthy to remain a member of the honorable profession of arms.

Certain Moral Attributes

"There are certain moral attributes common to the ideal officer and the perfect gentleman, a lack of which is indicated by acts of dishonesty or unfair dealing, of indecency or indecorum or of lawlessness, injustice or cruelty. Not every one is or can be expected to meet ideal standards or to possess the attributes in the exact degree demanded by the standards of his own time; but there is a limit of tolerance below which the individual standards in these respects of an officer or cadet cannot follow without his being morally unfit to be an officer or cadet, or to be considered a gentleman.

"This article contemplates such conduct by an officer or cadet, which, taking all the circumstances into consideration, satisfactorily shows such moral unfitness."

Awaits Reassignment

The war department said Elliott at present is assigned to temporary duty with air force headquarters here awaiting reassignment. In such status, he does not have an office at the army's Pentagon building.

The air forces said his current address was the Wardman Park hotel here. Efforts to telephone him there brought the reply from the hotel switchboard tonight that there was no answer at his suite. Friends suggested he might be in New York or at Hyde Park, but he could not be reached there.

Bradley Plans to Return to Germany Immediately

New York, June 15 (AP)—Gen. Bradley, 12th army group commander, is returning to Germany immediately, he disclosed today. Shortly after being named [June 7] by President Truman to succeed Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines as administrator of veterans' affairs Bradley said he still had 30 to 60 days' work winding up affairs in Europe.

2 TRUCK UNIONS VOTE TO STRIKE

ODT Assumes Control of Industry Today

In an election participated in by less than 10 per cent of their memberships, two truck drivers' unions voted 805 to 128 in favor of a strike last night.

The strike preference was voted, despite a last minute announcement by the office of defense transportation that it was assuming control of the entire Chicago trucking industry, and despite prior warnings that strikes against government managed industries are illegal.

All indications were that many drivers would go on strike this morning, altho no formal calls were issued by responsible union leaders last night.

Troops Are Called

In preparation, more than 1,000 troops were called from Camp Custer, Mich., and other army military installations, and were scheduled to camp on Northerly Island by 7 a. m. today. Whether they may be used to protect trucking or to operate trucks was not announced.

Unions involved are the Independent Chicago Truck Drivers and Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. The first has a membership of 6,000, the second of 8,000. The independent voted 482 to 64 for a strike, the IBT 323 to 64. The election was supervised by the national labor relations board.

Doubts Majority Will Strike

Capt. George Barnes of the police labor detail, said the strike vote was not fully representative, and expressed doubt a majority of the drivers would strike. IBT officials are opposed to a strike, and have vowed to keep their men working. Independent union leaders have adopted a hands off policy.

The unions' quarrel is with the labor board, which recently granted them a $4.08 weekly wage boost for a 51 hour week altho they had demanded a $5 increase and a 48 hour week.

The independent union struck for a week last month, aided by rank and file members of the IBT, and so tied up military and civilian supplies that President Truman ordered the ODT to take over affected trucking lines. Yesterday the ODT expanded the seizure to include all trucking firms having working agreements with the two unions and affiliates, thus affecting some 80,000 drivers.

Hidden Valley Dwellers Hide Nothing, But All Wear Smiles

BY WALTER SIMMONS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ABOARD TRANSPORT PLANE OVER HIDDEN VALLEY, New Guinea, June 14 [Delayed]—The first detailed description of the natives in Hidden valley, the inaccessible region where an American WAC and two servicemen are awaiting rescue as the result of a plane crash, was given today in a radio interview with Capt. Cecil Walters, Portland, Ore., commander of the rescue party of Filipino paratroopers.

"The natives," said Walters, "average five feet, three to four inches in height. They are almost completely naked. The women are a bit shorter in stature. They wear a sash around their middle and nothing above that. The men wear all the fancy ornaments—the women wear none.

"The hair of the men resembles a French poodle's, only it is in much tighter kinks. They are very flat footed—their arches actually bulge out toward the center. Instead of being knock kneed they are knock arched.

Not Mr. America Type

"We've seen no broken bones or skin diseases. Their teeth on the average are excellent, probably better than our own. Most of them are wiry—not heavy set. I have seen only one well developed native. I wouldn't say that he's a Mr. America type, but he's closer to being well developed than any I've seen."

Capt. Walters frequently was heckled by the three survivors of the crash—WAC Corp. Margaret Hastings, Oswego, N. Y.; Lt. Joseph McCollum, Trenton, Mo., and T/Sgt. Kenneth Decker, Kelso, Wash.—during the interview. Once describing the rattan bracelets which the natives wear on their wrists and upper arms, he said:

"Corp. Hastings has a couple. She's queen of the valley—she gets just about anything she wants from the natives."

The captain was amazed to find that the valley dwellers, unlike the sturdy Filipinos who can carry twice as much as an American over long distances, tire easily when used as bearers.

"They have only one type of building implement that we've seen so far," he said. "It's a black stone shaped in the form of a pick and very hard.

"As for ornaments, they use fur for their hats—and a lot of them wear hats. Sounds like the absent minded professor who left his pants at home," but was sure to have his hat on."

Finds Them Friendly

Capt. Walters said that the people in this area, visited by white men for the first time, are friendly and have a loose tribal government ruled by old men who are much respected. He found the children even more friendly than the adults.

"These are possibly the happiest people I've ever seen. They are always enjoying themselves."

Unlike other New Guinea natives, these people have no liking for seashell ornaments, Capt. Walters said. He saw only one warrior who wore them. He said that immediately after the landing they were surrounded by husky fighters, one of whom apparently mistook a slight but tough Filipino paratrooper for a woman.

"He put his arm around the Filipino, Sgt. Alfred Bayon of Chicago; we could hear sweet nothings coming from his mouth as he whispered in his ear. When he picked himself up he was pretty well convinced that the sergeant was a man, tho."

The group, only survivors of a transport crash which killed 21 WACs and service men, expects to spend four or five days in a trek down the valley to the base camp. Then a glider will land and return them and the paratroopers to civilization.

Ready for Descent

MANILA, P. I., June 15 (AP)—The three injured survivors of a transport plane crash in the rugged New Guinea mountains, near the hidden valley of Shangri-La, accompanied by two medical corpsmen and a paratroop commander, were expected to start their 10 mile trek down the mountainside today.

BRITON TELLS HOW HE CAUGHT RIBBENTROP

Divorcee Landlady of Nazi Also Held

MONTGOMERY'S HDQ., Germany, June 15—A British army officer tonight told how he led a detachment into the Hamburg apartment of an attractive landlady and trapped Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, dressed in pajamas and with a vial of poison strapped to his body. Ribbentrop, arrested yesterday, was being questioned "somewhere in Europe" by expert allied examiners.

Lt. J. B. Adam of Paisley, Scotland, gave this account of the taking of the once dapper foreign minister who is credited with selling Hitler on the idea that he could invade Poland without British interference:

"We called at an unpretentious block of flats at about 9 a. m. and knocked on the door of the top floor of a five story building. Getting no answer, we nearly decided to break it down when a lady in a dressing gown appeared. She was dark haired and very attractive and we learned later she was 35 and divorced.

Grabbed by Shoulder

"We brushed her aside, saying we'd come in and search. My Belgian sergeant, two British sergeants, and I split up, going into separate rooms. The Belgian sergeant, a strong armed sort of a fellow, shouted, 'There's a man in here' in French so we converged on his room.

"Ribbentrop was just beginning to realize something was doing. He was lying prone in a single bed when the Belgian grabbed him by the shoulder and said in German, 'Get up.'

"Ribbentrop kept muttering in German, 'What's the matter?' He was dressed in pink and white pajamas of ordinary looking cloth, nothing fancy."

Earlier it had been reported that he was captured naked.

Adam said, "We searched him from top to bottom while he kept muttering, 'What's the matter?' Then he started putting on his clothes as we asked him questions like how long he had been here, where he had come from. He replied, 'A few weeks. From up north.' And I told him, 'These are very vague answers.'"

Congratulates Captors

The lieutenant said Ribbentrop was nearly finished dressing when he confessed his identity and added: "I prefer to speak in English. You know who I am, all right, don't you? I congratulate you. If you had been two days later I would have given myself up voluntarily."

Adam said the landlady maintained that she had not suspected

SOVIET LOOTERS LIFT WATCHES OF FRIEND AND FOE

[This is the fourth in a series of articles by a veteran newspaper man, who was interned by the Germans nearly five years and liberated by Russian troops in eastern Pomerania.]

BY B. J. KOSPOTH
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, June 15—One of Kipling's "Barrack Room Ballads" has a refrain that runs something like: "O, the loot; O, the loot; O, the bloomin' loot."

It might be sung with gusto by every soldier of the Red army in Germany.

Every one knows by now that the Russians are good fighters, but they are also the most expert and conscientious looters on record. The very first hero my comrade and I met at Tychow, Pomerania, where the Nazis had been holding us as prisoners of war, asked us what time it was. We glanced innocently at our wristwatches and his grim face brightened.

He held out one eager hand—with the other he was pointing a big pistol at us—and said in Russian, but unmistakably: "Give me." The fact that we were prisoners, allies, and friends made no difference to him. He was realizing the ambition of a lifetime for which he had risked his life in a score of battles. And after all he was liberating us. So we gave him our watches with good grace.

Alarm Clocks Excepted

I have seen Red soldiers wearing as many as six wrist watches, one next to the other. The only kind of timepieces they are not interested in is alarm clocks for they can't carry them around and they are not early risers anyway.

Some American ex-prisoners threw their watches on the ground and trod on them rather than give them up to their liberators. The Russians almost wept. After spending nearly three months in the closest contact with Red soldiers of all races, from Caucasians to Mongolians, I have reached the conclusion that they are primarily children. Sometimes they can be vicious children, but most often their naivete is disarming.

Next to watches, umbrellas fascinate them most. It is a common sight to see a Russian soldier, with his rifle slung over his shoulder, promenading down a village street in cloudless weather proudly carrying an open umbrella. We inquired into this strange passion and gathered that only a few privileged persons in the soviet own umbrellas.

The same is true of bicycles. When they first arrived, not one Red in a hundred could ride a bicycle, but they are all learning fast and every town is full of soldiers enthusiastically coasting down hills and around corners at the risk of breaking their necks.

Catch On Quickly

Then too, contact with western civilization is rapidly transforming the Red soldiers. At first the looters ignored such articles as safety razors, soap, suspenders, and pocket mirrors, and shirts and socks were comparatively safe with them, but

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—German submarines ranging the United States east coast at the peak of the U-boat campaign in 1942 and 1943 planted mines so effectively that major ports, including New York City, were closed to ocean traffic for brief periods.

Revealing this today, the navy said five mines were swept from the entrance to New York harbor between Nov. 13 and 31, 1942, and from Nov. 13 to 15 the port was completely bottled up, with no traffic moving in or out.

Chesapeake Bay Blocked

The entrance to Chesapeake bay, gateway to the ports of Norfolk and Newport News, Va., and Baltimore, Md., was twice closed to traffic, once from June 16 to 17, 1942, and again from Sept. 12 to 14, 1942. Before the Chesapeake bay area was closed the first time, four vessels had been damaged or sunk. One was sunk when it reopened.

Also closed at various times as a result of enemy planted mines were Jacksonville, Fla.; Charleston, S. C.; and Wilmington, Del. These were all closed for brief periods in the fall of 1942, and Charleston was again closed for two days in September, 1943.

The destroyer Bainbridge, while making a depth charge attack against a submarine outside the Virginia capes June 14, 1942, was damaged by a heavy explosion astern. It was believed one of her depth charges detonated a mine.

Big Tugboat Sunk

The day Chesapeake bay traffic was reopened June 17, 1942, the medium sized United States merchant ship Santore was mined and sank.

Five enemy mines were swept by mine craft outside Chesapeake bay in June, 1942, and seven in September, 1942.

Four were swept outside Delaware bay in June, 1942, and a fifth was exploded in that vicinity by the large tugboat John R. Williams, which sank.

In addition, the navy disclosed, 10 enemy mines were swept at the entrance to the Panama canal in the vicinity of Colon.

YANKS TEARING LAST JAPANESE LINE TO PIECES

Victory Inside Week Seen by Buckner

GUAM, June 16 [Saturday]—(AP)—Lt. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner Jr., predicted today that the 77 day old Okinawa campaign will be wound up by his advancing 10th army within a week.

He expressed the belief as his divisions, tearing to pieces the last stand line of the Japanese at the southern tip of Yaeju escarpment, overran a fourth of the plateau area.

Buckner said the Japanese either must attempt a final suicide banzai charge or keep falling back until they are killed or driven into the sea.

A fleet war bulletin today reported that Maj. Gen. James L. Bradley's 96th division, which captured 500 foot high Yaeju peak Thursday, advanced several hundred yards in the plateau's center yesterday. Tanks and flame throwers led the way. This division also captured the southeastern ridge of Yaeju hill.

At the same time, Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold's 7th infantry division, curling in the eastern arm of a pincers behind the escarpment, moved ahead 700 yards thru strongpoints.

Take 145 More Prisoners

Adm. Nimitz said the 10th army brought heavy pressure on the center and eastern flanks.

On the west, where the 1st marine division seized Kunishi ridge, Japanese opposition held up the leathernecks, who strengthened their positions despite heavy fire from Yuza hill.

Winding up their victory on Oroku peninsula, the 6th marine division took 145 prisoners yesterday.

Yanks of the 96th division drove into the town of Ozato and found it so saturated with Japanese mines they were forced to withdraw.

Shells, Bombs Bake Japs

In seven days, 200,000 rounds of artillery shells had been poured into the cliff positions, driving the enemy from the face of the bluff and away from the rim of the plateau.

Enemy suicides were increasing daily. Infantry charging over the hills and ravines strode across the bodies of scores of Japanese, many of whom had committed hara kiri.

Maj. Gen. Pedro A. Del Valle, commanding the 1st marine division assaulting the west flank, declared it was possible the end might come by Sunday "if we could hit their command post."

Burn Command Post Area

Sixty-four marine Corsairs tried to wipe out the command post. They attacked a ravine, where it was believed hidden, with 19,220 gallons of fuel jelly bombs that covered two acres with solid flame and fired 465 rockets into caves.

Only a nucleus of seasoned infantry men was believed left to the Japanese garrison, now possibly only 10,000 strong out of an original force of 85,000. The rest were thought to be laborers from naval construction and anti-aircraft units.

Amphibious forces which seized Senaga Island just off the peninsula further secured the important Naha air field. The heights of the rocky island commanded the field.

Fish Caught 'Trespassing' on a Kansas Corn Field

Tonganoxie, Kas., June 15 (AP)—Alton Grems, Tonganoxie iceman, spied a carp isolated in the backwater of Stranger creek. Just as he attacked the carp with his ice pick a game warden appeared. Justice of the Peace Perry Walters dismissed the case by ruling: "Since backwater from a flood is neither a stream nor a lake . . . and since fish are trespassers on farmers' cornfields, the accused is innocent of violating any state law."

ARVEY PRAISES HEAD HUNTERS' TRIBE FOR AID

Loyal Igorots Kill Japs and Work Hard

One of the brightest memories brought home by Lt. Col. Jacob M. Arvey from three years in the South Pacific and the Philippines is his recollection of the day he met the head-hunting Igorots.

The former 24th ward alderman, serving as civil affairs officer, was with the 33d division on the battle line running thru Rosario, south of Baguio, in the Philippines, last February when he received a call for help from the main refugee camp.

"They told me that 1,500 people had just come out of the mountains back of Baguio who looked like savages," Arvey related yesterday. "When I got there, there were 2,500 men, women, and children. The camp commander said the head man had been trying to see him. This officer had heard of the Igorots, but, like the rest of us, he didn't know about them and he was really worried.

Want to Pay for Food

"I was there when the head man came in with two others. One of them spoke good English. He told us they had been there two days eating government food. They said the food was good, but they would eat no more unless they could work to pay for it.

"We set up a daily wage scale of 1 peso, 50 cents American, and arranged for them to buy their food at prices that left them some of their pay.

"There was nothing they wouldn't do. Even the women would take ammunition or whatever our troops needed, place it on their heads, and walk straight up a hillside, with machine gun fire all around them. They built roads and bridges under fire.

"With Japanese cavalry horses, we organized a pack train, and the Igorots ran it.

Killed Lots of Japs

"The Igorots are still with the 33d division. They are courageous and utterly loyal to the United States. They hate the Japanese and killed a lot of them."

[The Igorots, who, like the Moros, fought the Spaniards in the Philippines, became friendly to the United States because of its pacification policy. The Moros had to be conquered by forces of Gen. Frederick Funston in a campaign like that in progress on Okinawa.]

When Baguio, the summer capital of the Philippines, was captured May 1, Col. Arvey held an observance at evening retreat that included a 48 gun salute for the 48 states.

"I thought the boys in Europe would have appreciated it if they had known that an American division using Jap guns and Filipino cannoneers had given them a salute," he said.

U. S. WARSHIPS POUND KURILE ISLAND 2 DAYS

ABOARD A UNITED STATES DESTROYER IN THE NORTH PACIFIC, June 12 [Delayed]—(AP)—United States naval units in the north Pacific pounded Japan's principal central Kuriles Island bastion—Matsuwa—twice in the last 24 hours in daylight raids.

The task force of cruisers and destroyers yesterday fired from heavy seas thru a pea soup fog. Destroyer decks were awash and gun crews drenched as they fired by instrument. Several housand shells were expended in the first 20 minutes.

Today the task force was back and as it formed for the bombardment the fog lifted around towering Fuyo Yama volcano and exposed the entire island. This destroyer's target was an air strip which was blanketed by shells.

Not a shot was fired from the shore in either of the attacks and no enemy planes were seen.

Men aboard who participated in the bombardment included William L. Martin, Pho 2/C, Peoria, Ill.; Leonard G. Barwig, Y 1/C, 3004 W. Cullom av., Chicago, and Casimir J. Mietus, FC 1/C, 2835 W. 40th st., Chicago.

ALLIES TESTING SPEEDY U-BOATS NAZIS GAVE UP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, June 15—American and British naval authorities are investigating German U-boats reportedly capable of making 18 knots or more under water, it was admitted by naval authorities here today. Details of the craft which surrendered in the British Isles when Germany gave up are being kept secret since it is considered doubtful if the Germans communicated them to Japan. Because the allies have ample submarine fleets and the swift nazi craft were not built for the waters of the Pacific it is doubtful if they will be used against the Japs, it was said.

Reports from Germany threw some light on the speedy nazi submarines. They said that the Germans had developed a propellant called "ingolene" which gives the U-boats an underwater speed of 25 knots. No explanation of ingolene was given.

AMERICANS DASH 22 MILES INTO CAGAYAN VALLEY

MANILA, June 16 [Saturday]—(AP)—The 37th Buckeye division, in a spectacular smash out of the mountains of northern Luzon, has rolled 22 miles into the broad Cagayan valley, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

At last free of the gorgelike confines on highway No. 5, Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler's division seized valley towns of Santiago and Echague in the drive. A headquarters spokesman said the Yanks met no determined resistance after pressing thru the heavily-defended Oriboung pass guarding the valley entrance.

One Obstacle Ahead

There are now no major obstacles ahead of the veteran mechanized infantry men until they reach the Cagayan river crossing at Naguillian, 27 miles northeast of their present positions in the broad, 100-mile valley that runs north to the sea. It is in this valley that the Japanese are expected to make possibly their last major stand on Luzon.

Simultaneously, elements of the United States 6th division drove five miles north in the mountains along highway No. 4, west of the valley, sealing tighter the enemy units caught in that wilderness.

The 6th division, identified for the first time as the force conducting this cleanup drive north of Bagabag, killed 400 Japanese and captured 40.

The 33d division, driving in the Tabio sector of the Agno river gorge above Baguio, accounted for another 400 enemy dead. In central Luzon, east of Manila, the 38th division counted 100 dead Japanese and the 1st cavalry division and the 112th cavalry regimental combat team disposed of nearly 400 more.

Mop Up Davao Area

On the southeastern Philippine island of Mindanao, the 24th division cleaned out a series of Japanese cave and pillbox positions in the Davao area and captured a supply dump of rocket-launchers.

The 31st division on Mindanao made progress south of the Talomo trail and killed at least 100 Japanese.

Medium and fighter-bombers dropped 236 tons of bombs in support of ground operations on Luzon.

Formosa again was bombed, 268 tons being dropped on towns and air fields in the southwestern part of the island and a grounded enemy plane being destroyed on an islet off the northeast coast.

Six coastal vessels and six others that were under construction were destroyed in a night raid on the Shanghai waterfront, while a fuel train and four locomotives were wrecked in French Indo-China.

Says Petain Overruled Plea Against Armistice

PARIS, June 15 (AP)—Paul Reynaud told a commission of judges preparing today for Marshal Petain's trial that he tried to prevent France from signing the armistice with Germany five years ago, but was overruled by Petain and Camille Chautemps. Petain succeeded Reynaud as premier June 16, 1940. Chautemps became Petain's vice premier for a time.

KNOCK OUT BLOW BELIEVED DEALT CITY OF OSAKA

GUAM, June 16 [Saturday]—(AP)—Osaka was in flames today from what may have been a knockout blow such as the commander of the Super Forts says already has been dealt to two of Japans's five key cities.

After a near-record force of 520 Super Forts unloaded 3,000 tons of incendiaries on Osaka Friday [Japanese date], Maj. Gen. Curtis Le May said further raids on this greatest of all Japan's industrial cities might be unnecessary.

The chief of the 21st bomber command declared that his giant raiders already were well on their way toward the destruction of the five cities which Gen. Arnold on his visit here said yesterday would have to be razed to rob Japan of the power to resist.

Arnold, commander of army air forces, listed the five as Tokyo, Nagoya, Yokohama, Kobe, and Osaka, and this is how Le May checked them off:

Yokohama and Kobe are "gone" as far as industrial targets of interest to the bombardiers is concerned.

The damage done to Osaka was not immediately assessable because thick clouds forced the raiders to bomb by instrument. The Tokyo radio admitted that "a number" of fires were started. Near-by Amagasaki also was hit.

The 20th air force headquarters at Washington, D. C., reported one plane was lost.

M'ARTHUR SEES SHELLS FALL ON JAPS AT DAVAO

BY DONALD STARR
[Chicago Tribune War Correspondent]
[For the Combined American Press]

WITH GEN. MacARTHUR IN THE FIELD [Date Censored]—Standing a mile away from the Jap lines in an artillery observation post on the crest of a hill, Gen. MacArthur today watched batteries drop shells on enemy positions near Davao where the Japs still are putting up stubborn resistance.

The Japs now hold the main east-west highway but MacArthur's troops gradually are cleaning up the north-south artery with pushes from both directions. The smell of the dead hangs heavily over most of the area which, even before the war, was occupied largely by Japanese tradesmen, artisans, and farmers.

The hilly terrain is covered with thick undergrowth which has provided the Japs with ideal positions for their type of fighting.

Artillery fire by the enemy stopped two days ago, and it is presumed they have no heavy weapons to train on the advancing Americans. Most of the opposing force consists of Jap navy personnel which is considered tougher than army.

BURGLARS STEAL $2,900 LINGERIE
Burglars broke thru a skylight of a drug store at 3869 Cottage Grove av. early yesterday, tunneled into a women's shop next door at 3871 Cottage Grove av., and took $2,900 worth of lingerie, Rasem Malley, 4011 Ellis av., the owner, reported to police.

HOW DESTROYER CREW CHEATED SUICIDE PLANE

Ship a Shambles, but Will Fight Again

Vallejo, Cal., June 15 (AP)—Scarred and battered, with her superstructure wrecked from a direct hit by a Japanese kamikaze plane off Okinawa April 29, the doughty 2,100 ton destroyer Hazelwood is berthed at the Mare Island navy yard today being refitted for action.

Ten of her 19 officers, including her skipper, Comdr. V. P. Duow of Abingdon, Md., and 67 of her 299 enlisted men are dead or missing.

The gallant craft came home just four days short of her second birthday. She was commissioned at the Bethlehem yards in San Francisco June 18, 1943, and saw action in many Pacific strikes.

Survivor Tells Story

The saga of her nearly-mortal battle against three Nipponese suicide planes was told by Lt. [j. g.] L. E. Legas of Seattle, Wash., senior surviving officer.

Low clouds, scudded over the fast carrier group which the Hazelwood was escorting 100 miles northeast of Okinawa when three unidentified planes were spotted.

Duow's ship left formation to protect a vessel at the edge of the group. The first of the Japanese kamikaze trio scored a direct hit on a nearby destroyer and the Hazelwood turned to her aid.

The second plane dived at the Hazelwood, grazed the No. 4 gun and crashed into the sea. Seconds later the 3d scooted out of the clouds too close for the 5-inch guns to be effective. His right wing struck the after stack, swerving the plane into the superstructure where it exploded. The violent blast crumpled everything above decks, destroyed all fire control apparatus and communications.

Wounded Transferred

Legas took charge forward and the task of caring for the wounded and overseeing the ship's control was assumed by Lt. [j. g.] C. M. Locke, Lockwood, Cal.

Locke ordered the ship stopped dead in the water as three other destroyers braved the flames and danger of further explosions to pull alongside and spray the decks with their hoses. Wounded from the Hazelwood were transferred to the protecting warships by small boats. Coxswain Henry E. Miskowicz, Chicago, helped throw wounded men overboard and then swam with them to another ship.

When the oil-fed blaze was brought under control one of the destroyers towed the crippled Hazelwood for nearly 12 hours before power was restored by the surviving crewmen.

It said many of the dead, who appeared to have been killed with knives, were found with their hands tied behind their backs.

COUPLE OF AMERICAN STRONG MEN GET A LESSON FROM WOMAN

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

AN INDIAN PORT [By air mail]—Two scrawny Indian laborers were struggling with a basket of fruit, trying to lift it high enough so a woman porter could balance it on her head and walk off with it.

"Let's show these guys what real men can do," said Anthony Englert of Jasper, Ind., to his buddy of the port battalion here. The buddy said it was okay with him. So the two GIs tapped the laborers, shooed them aside, bent over the basket and flexed their muscles. Nothing happened. Englert and his pal stared at each other in surprise. "This is really heavy," Englert said.

But they were committed to an exhibition, so, stifling grunts, they hoisted it. In time they got it high enough for the woman to walk under it. They eased it down on her head. As they took off their hands they expected the woman to collapse. Instead she smiled and wriggled off in that strange swivel hip motion Indians use to make their feet move and their heads stand still.

REDS AND WEST WILL GET ALONG WELL, IKE SAYS

Hints Final Troop Moves Await Big Three

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 15 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower today forecast continued harmony with Russia, and told a press conference there was nothing in his experience with Russians that led him to doubt the western allies could coöperate with them perfectly.

"The individual Russian," the supreme commander added, "is one of the friendliest persons in the world."

Eisenhower gave his longest review of the war, and also discussed prospects for the peace, in talking to correspondents at his headquarters here before he left by plane for his Frankfurt headquarters.

Justifies Bombings

He told the correspondents:

1. The allied control council will be a success as the over-all governing body of Germany, altho peace problems are slow of solution;

2. Adolf Hitler, "if not dead, must be undergoing the worst possible punishment . . . to be hunted in disguise and underground";

3. The allies were justified in wiping out German cities by air bombardment;

4. Marshal Von Rundstedt was the best German commander the allies met;

5. The allied armies were the best equipped in the world, altho the Germans had superior tanks until the American Pershings arrived, and the Germans' 88 millimeter guns and jet planes were outstanding weapons;

6. The chief characteristic of Eisenhower's command was the cooperation of ground, sea, and air forces, which was fully as important as integration among the allies and it was because of this that the allies won;

7. The Germans "knew the jig was up" three days after their Ardennes offensive began [last December 16], but they still held out in hopes of splitting the allies;

8. Air supply planes, which flew in 2,000 tons a day, made possible the continued advance into the reich after the crossing of the Rhine;

9. Germany is unrepentant, with the majority of her people denying her war guilt;

10. The punishment should be made to fit the crime in dealing with war criminals.

Eisenhower said his men were tired of war after winning a peace they earnestly hope will be preserved.

Will Take Time

"I have no doubts, myself, that the control council is going to work," he said. "It will take some little time, but all the arrangements are made. They don't even have to wait for my return. Whoever is senior United States theater commander here will be my alter ego and go ahead with the job."

Eisenhower denied reports that American troops already had started withdrawing behind the Mulde river to make way for the Russians, and said arrangements were not yet complete for the movement of American troops into Berlin. Eisenhower did not say so, but he indicated that final troop shifts for the ultimate occupation would be delayed until after the next meeting of President Truman, Prime Minister Churchill, and Premier Stalin, or until after Eisenhower himself returns to Europe.

Eisenhower, talking of the occupation arrangements, said:

"Everything we have to do to get this thing started has been discussed in a friendly atmosphere. We are all attempting to get our plans made up so that they can be brought together, coördinated, and agreed to by every one, so that the movement can start.

"There have been certain little—not misunderstandings—little things to iron out. Little arrangements that have slowed things a bit. But they will be done. I am perfectly confident of that."

He said his occupational boundary negotiations with the French had been finished "to my complete satisfaction."

He's "Pro-Consul" Now

Replying to questions on how long the occupation of Germany would last, Eisenhower said he was "an American executive of policies that will be laid down by the heads of governments."

"I am now pro-consul for my government in a region where I am going to do what I am told," he explained.

"I don't know what the governments are going to find it necessary to do, and wise to do.

"My policy-making job ended when the last shot was fired."

The general said that in the treatment of Germany, the continued application of the non-fraternization rule—except for small children—would depend upon the attitude of the German people, and how soon Nazi remnants were destroyed.

About Nazi elements, however, Eisenhower said that while there would always be "some fanatics" loose in Germany, no organized German underground had appeared, and he doubted that any could under present occupation conditions.

Rundstedt No. 1 General

Concerning German commanders, Eisenhower said Marshal Rommel was bold and dangerous, but not too sound as a general, while Marshal von Rundstedt was "the most highly trained, the most skilful, the most educated soldier we met."

The American supreme commander said that for himself the most worrisome night during three years of war was that of Nov. 7, 1942, when he invaded North Africa. His "soul shaking" decision, he said, was to issue the order to go ahead with the Normandy invasion June 6, 1944, despite adverse weather reports. He disclosed that many allied officers had doubted Europe would be invaded successfully.

Navy's Newest Scout Plane

Speed Doubled

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—The navy today lifted the secrecy surrounding its new scout plane which is designed for use from battleship and cruiser catapults.

The ship—the Curtiss-Wright SC-1 Seahawk, a single seater monoplane—is in action in the Pacific.

The plane—the first one place scout ever used by the navy—was described officially as having double the speed of the planes it will replace. It flies higher and farther, is much more heavily armed, and can carry more bombs and depth charges than any plane in its class.

The power plant is a new Wright Cyclone nine cylinder engine with about three times the horse power of scout planes now with the fleet. These have about 450 horse power.

Scout planes are used to hunt the enemy at sea, to spot gun fire both in sea battles and when warships support amphibious operations, and in search and rescue work.

ARREST WOMAN ON MERCHANDISE FRAUD CHARGES

Martha Marie Thrasher, 24, a pretty brunette, yesterday was arrested by two detectives from the confidence detail, who said she has confessed obtaining more than $7,000 in cash and merchandise from department stores thru fraudulent checks and spurious charge accounts.

She came to Chicago June 1 and registered in the Stevens hotel, said Deputy Chief of Detectives John Warren, and since has obtained merchandise worth $3,000. In Chicago she posed as Mrs. Philip Wood of Detroit, sister-in-law of Gar Wood, the yachtsman.

She came here from Washington, D. C., where, in two days, posing as Mrs. Benson Ford, whose uncle is Henry Ford, she obtained $2,200 in cash and $688 in merchandise with fraudulent checks, Warren said. She also admitted that she had cashed at least $1,200 in bad checks in Detroit.

After her arrest by Sgts. Joe Keating and John Kratzmeyer, summoned when a Michigan av. luggage store official grew suspicious, police recovered a quantity of merchandise from her hotel room.

U. S. S. SARATOGA HIT 7 TIMES, BUT KEEPS PUNCHING

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—The U. S. S. Saratoga, oldest and biggest aircraft carrier in service with the United States fleet, now can lay claim also to being the toughest.

On Feb. 21, two days after D-day on Iwo Island, the navy said today, big "Sara" was cruising with a fast carrier task group northwest of that island when she took a terrific pounding from enemy air attackers, including some suiciders, who scored seven direct hits.

The final count of her casualties was 123 men killed or missing and 192 wounded.

Back on Job

After a record breaking repair job at the Puget Sound, Wash., navy yard she is already back in action.

The Saratoga had joined other carriers of Vice Adm. Mitscher's task force 58 in blasting the Tokyo area early in February and was proceeding south to give direct support to the Iwo landings when she took her latest damage.

The strike came late in the afternoon as the carrier was launching her planes. A group of Japanese bombers, believed to be on suicide missions, closed in. The ship's anti-aircraft guns and pilots in the air shot down four. Four others crash-bombed the ship. The ninth was knocked down alongside the ship, but freakishly caromed off the water and exploded, tearing a huge hole in the carrier's side below the waterline, rupturing many fuel oil lines, and giving the ship a six degree list.

Blanketed in Flames

Burning planes and leaking fuel blanketed the ship in flames. The flight deck, at the forward end, was battered beyond use, and a Japanese suicider penetrated the side of the ship into the hangar deck, where his plane exploded, causing great fires.

Despite this ordeal, however, the Saratoga not only continued to move but gathered speed as heroic survivors of her crew fought to get her fires under control.

Within only a few hours they successfully completed the job, and the Saratoga, proceeding under her own power, continued flight operations, landing not only her own planes but those of another damaged carrier in the vicinity.

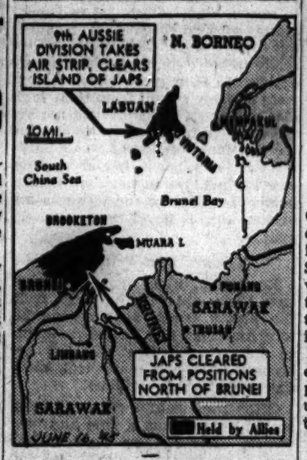
Shortly after the first mass attack, more Japanese planes appeared and one managed to drop another bomb on the carrier before crashing into the water. Damage from that attack was also soon brought under control.

Altho it was the first time the Sara had been damaged by air attack, she had twice before suffered severe damage from Japanese torpedoes, requiring extensive repairs.

TWO FROM HINSDALE

Lt. Edwin R. Moore Jr. of 807 Garfield st., Hinsdale, and Lt. Robert Williamson, 807 S. McKinley rd., Hinsdale, were aboard the Saratoga when it was bombed, Moore's wife said yesterday. Both were uninjured.

Borneo Fighting



San Francisco, June 15 (AP)—The American Broadcasting company [Blue network] intercepted a Tokyo report tonight that an allied fleet is approaching the rich oil refinery center of Balikpapan on the east central coast of Borneo. The enemy radio said three battleships, a seaplane carrier, 16 destroyers and "other warships" comprised the armada.

Tokyo radio reported an allied task force, presumably British, bombarded Truk in the Carolines today as carrier planes raided the bypassed port for the third day.

Win 3d Borneo Air Strip

MANILA, June 16 [Saturday]—(AP)—Australian troops have captured Timbalai air strip, third field taken in their invasion of Borneo, and reduced the last known Japanese positions on Labuan Island, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

The Japanese also have been cleared out of positions north of the town of Brunei, which has been captured, a headquarters bulletin said.

Allied heavy bombers hit fuel tanks at Balikpapan, on the Borneo east coast.

He is an excellent student, his teachers, Miss Ethel Bonfield and Mrs. Bertha Farrell, who were at the presentation, said. "I have been planning this for years but I never thought it would come true," Robert said.

NAZI EMBASSY AT MADRID GIVES AWAY SECRETS

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MADRID, Spain, June 15—The German embassy in Madrid, nerve center of Nazi espionage, especially in South America and the United States, revealed some secrets today when American embassy officials took newspaper correspondents thru the 100 room mansion in fashionable Castellana av.

The Spanish government sequestered the building at allied request, pending its disposition under the unconditional surrender terms for the reich.

Not All Secrets Bared

Not all Hitler's secrets were disclosed, however, as a mound of cinders in the courtyard and numerous piles of ashes on the tiled bathroom floors betrayed where the Nazi diplomats and spy masters burned all incriminating documents before the German debacle.

The doors of safes, strongboxes, and steel vaults gaped open in every room, disclosing empty shelves and compartments, to show how thoroughly Hitler's staff destroyed the evidence of their world-wide activities.

Vast radio equipment occupies almost the entire top floor. There is a powerful transmitter capable of reaching Japan, and complicated receiving sets screened to capture shipping messages from the north and south Atlantic, for submarine attacks.

Housed Kaiser's Embassy

The ornate rococo building also housed the kaiser's embassy in World War I., and the correspondents inspected Marine Capt. Kurt Doehner's quarters on the second floor, where the Dutch born Javanese dancer Mata Hari, in 1918, betrayed herself as a German spy and mistress of the imperial German naval attache of that epoch.

Many rooms are sound proofed, with padded walls and double doors for the secret conversations of espionage agents.

PANAMA PICKS NEW PRESIDENT AND AID TO U. S.

PANAMA, Panama, June 15 (AP)—Enrique Adolfo Jimenez, 57, politican, financial expert and diplomat, was elected provisional president of Panama today at the installation session of the second national constituent assembly. Earlier, Recardo Adolfo de la Guardia resigned the presidency which he had held since October, 1941.

Jimenez was elected on the motion of 30 assembly members who also chose Ernesto de la Guardia Jr., a distant cousin of the outgoing president, and Paul Jimenez, a cousin of the incoming chief of state, as vice presidents.

One of Jimenez' first official acts was appointment of Dr. Joaquin Vallarino, an x-ray expert, as ambassador to the United States.

M. P.s TOLD: TURN YOUR HEAD WHEN GIs FRATERNIZE

Yanks Say Army Policy Never Will Work

BY KENNETH DIXON

OCCUPIED GERMANY, June 11 [Delayed] (AP)—Soldiers of all ranks are getting more and more pointed in their inquiries as to when the high command is going to admit it made a mistake and revoke the nonfraternization policy.

During the months since the allies entered Germany I have questioned thousands of soldiers—including perhaps a score of generals—on the policy. Their answer can be summed up in one sentence:

It is not working, never has worked and probably never will.

Since such statements would lay officers open to court martial, it is impossible to quote them by name, but they inevitably wax loquacious in their efforts to prove their point.

"Keeping the policy in force merely means I have to punish my men for being clumsy," a major general said. "You can't keep them from fraternizing—and I don't necessarily mean sexually either—so it becomes a question of some getting away with it and some not.

Look Other Way M. P.s Told

"I don't mind telling you that my M. P.s have been instructed to look the other way as much as possible except for flagrant cases or unsoldierly conduct. But the result still is that the men are not being punished for breaking the law but merely for getting caught at it. And I have to operate that way or I would have had my division in the guardhouse."

"It is supposed to make the Germans respect the American army, I am told," said a major in military government. "Instead it is making the whole army look ridiculous and cheap. Even at first, when there wasn't quite so much fraternizing, all it did was make the Germans resentful. Now they are laughing up their sleeves."

"It's making a cheater and a liar out of every doughboy who swaps a cake of soap to get his laundry done or gives a piece of candy," said one private. "Besides, these kids are looking for leaders. I don't know much about propaganda but I'll bet a couple of GIs here and there teaching German kids American games and American fair play could do more good than all your propaganda campaigns.

Venereal Rate Rises

"There isn't nearly as much sexual intimacy here as there's been in every other country we've been in, but the venereal disease rate is jumping way up," said a medical officer, "because even tho it isn't being used as evidence against them, boys still are afraid to visit prophylactic stations.

While it seems to be getting the most attention back home, the sex problem is not necessarily the main difficulty. It's the matter of gregarious association and actual occupation necessity.

"American kids are naturally friendly and we've encouraged them to get along with people in every other country," explained an intelligence officer. "Now they're supposed to suddenly change their whole characters and start kicking people in the face."

"I would like to see the guys who set that policy try to run a military government office in one of these towns without breaking a dozen technical nonfraternization rules a day," said another.

Miss Garland was previously married to David Rose, conductor-composer. It was the first wedding for Minnelli.

ALLIES URGED TO HELP POLES GET RID OF REDS

Exile Group Also Asks Aid in Freeing 16

LONDON, June 15 (AP)—The Polish government in exile urged the western democracies tonight to insist on the immediate withdrawal of Russian troops and political police from Polish soil.

The exile government also expressed the hope that Britain and the United States, at the forthcoming Moscow conference on Poland, might persuade Russia to release the 16 Polish underground leaders she imprisoned.

The government's statement was issued during a delay in the beginning of the Moscow consultations, designed to effect a reorganization of the Polish provisional government.

Representatives of the soviet sponsored Warsaw government and other Poles were in Moscow, but Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Peasant party leader and former premier of the London government, was still in London awaiting air transportation.

The British foreign office announced tonight that he would leave by plane tomorrow, accompanied by Jan Stanczyk, his former minister of labor.

If the imprisoned underground leaders are brought to trial, the statement said, "it would frustrate any attempts at genuine Polish-soviet understanding and would hamper organizing of collaboration between the soviet union and the allies."

A "reign of terrorism" now exists thruout Poland, the statement alleged, and no "legal and independent government of national unity" can be created "as long as Poland is cut off from the allies and the whole civilized world."

BABY CARRIAGE STOLEN

A baby carriage, valued at $40, was stolen from the hallway of his home, Allen Levinson, 7900 Essex av., reported last night to police.

RUSSIAN LOOTER HAPPY AS A BOY WITH NEW BIKE

recently they have been known to take even toothbrushes, and some of Stalin's girl soldiers are beginning to look out for lipsticks and face powder.

Now that the war is over and many Red fighting men are expecting to return to Russia soon, they are also collecting civilian attire and household furniture. I arrived at British lines after my tramp thru Russian occupied territory with nothing except the clothes on my back and part of a broken comb. Not all my belongings had been stolen; I had given away some of them.

In defense of Red soldiers it must be said that they are entirely dependent on what they can loot in the territories they conquer, for they receive no supplies of any kind from home, not even tobacco. The result is that after they have been in a place a couple of weeks there is absolutely nothing left. The population of such districts is not likely to start another war soon.

Different Kind of Discipline

Discipline in the Red army is not the same as in western armies.

On one occasion the commandant of an occupied village tried to make a soldier who had robbed us give up his loot. The officer had to shout and curse and finally drew his revolver before the man would obey. In another place an excited commandant called the German women together and urged them to hide in the woods for 24 hours. He explained that a body of troops was coming thru which he would not be able to control. The girls fled in panic, but the soldiers turned out to be the best behaved yet seen in those parts.

Nevertheless, in action the soldiers will obey without question, tho I have a suspicion that the prospect of acquiring the enemy's watches has something to do with their readiness to attack.

In contrast to American and British soldiers, I rarely heard them express any war weariness or desire to return home. They seemed moderately pleased when the war ended, but they were apparently quite ready to start fighting again if necessary. In Pomerania, at least, they were entirely cut off from their families and could neither write nor receive letters from home. Soon after the Russians freed me I wrote a letter to a newspaper friend in Moscow asking him to help me return home. I still have the letter in my pocket for I never was able to mail it.

Tommy Gun Primitive

Russian fighting men, as I have seen them, are very different from the picked troops that parade before American and British generals in Berlin. No two of them are dressed alike and many look more like bandits than soldiers.

Often their equipment consists of nothing more than a rifle and haversack. The Russian type tommy gun is primitive; whenever one sees up to date arms they are of American make. In fact, the Red soldiers of today are very much like the men I saw in 1920 during the civil war in the Crimea. Regiments on the march are followed by endless trains of horse drawn vehicles piled up with every imaginable variety of plunder. Altho I have seen Red soldiers do some very bloody work I also witnessed many instances of their good nature and kindness of heart.

They are very fond of children, and women with babies as a rule have nothing to fear from them. But like all primitive people they become highly dangerous when intoxicated. Fortunately, liquor was scarce in that part of Germany. For a drunken Red soldier starts shooting right away, and he is just as likely to kill his best friend as his worst enemy.

BRITON REVEALS HOW HE CAUGHT VON RIBBENTROP

Ribbentrop's identity, but merely knew him as "Herr Riese." Ribbentrop, a former champagne salesman, was captured as the result of a tip from the son of a Hamburg wine merchant who refused him haven on his arrival in Hamburg on April 30. Ribbentrop said the wine merchant got him the room in which he was found.

The foreign minister was identified to British authorities by his sister, Frau Doctor Marie Jenke, who also was taken into custody. She had returned to this country several days ago in a ship bringing repatriated German civilians from Scandinavia.

Ribbentrop said he was on "a mission from the dead Fuehrer," officials reported. Asked whether Hitler really was dead, Ribbentrop is reported to have replied, "I am certain he is, but, of course, I might be wrong." Ribbentrop said he himself left Berlin before its capitulation.

Letter to Churchill

Two large buff-colored envelopes lay on the table with hand-written addresses to Prime Minister "Wincent Churchill" [sic] and Field Marshal Montgomery.

Ribbentrop declared, "I want to ask you a favor. You put that envelope addressed to the prime minister inside the one addressed to the field marshal and deliver them intact to your commander."

A staff officer here said tonight the letters expressed "the propaganda line one would expect Ribbentrop to adopt. He tried to pretend he never wanted war between Britain and the Third Reich."

In addition to these letters Adam said there was a third letter to British Foreign Secretary Eden.

Older and Puffier

Adam said also that "we found several hundred thousand reichmarks in his possession in big notes. I wouldn't recognize Ribbentrop from his photograph. He looked older, puffier, with bags under his eyes. There was not a trace of liquor in his room and I don't think he had been drinking hard lately. We took him and the woman in a jeep to headquarters. Both claimed he took the room in her flat just a few weeks ago without prior acquaintanceship.

"I checked that she slept apparently in another room. She said he had stuck close to the flat and had not gone for long walks and things like that.

"He put on a brown tweed coat, dark suit, and felt hat. He had sunglasses but not reading glasses in his pocket."

On the way to British headquarters for a medical search which revealed the poison vial strapped to his groin, the nazi official was "very thoughtful—very worried about his family whom he said were in South Germany," Adam related.

LAUNCH U. S. INQUIRY INTO MISTREATMENT OF VET AT DOWNEY

Maltreatment of mental patients at the Downey veterans hospital near North Chicago is under investigation by the federal government as a result of a report that a patient was beaten with an attendant's belt, Assistant United States Atty. Bernard H. Sokol said yesterday.

The patient, Sokol said, was Paul Lillie, 51, a mental patient and veteran of the first World war, on whose back cuts were reported to have been found. The alleged attack occurred last Feb. 2, Sokol said. Prosecution of the accused attendant will be delayed, however, until another orderly who is believed to have witnessed the affair can be found. The missing orderly fled from the hospital the night of the beating.

An attendant at the hospital, which cares for mental and alcoholic patients, is under federal indictment for stabbing another attendant in a fight over a nurse. He is Reuben Bettis, 49.

SENATE ACQUITS NORTH DAKOTAN IN IMPEACHMENT

Bismarck, N. D., June 15 (AP)—The North Dakota senate, sitting as a high court of impeachment, tonight adjudged Oscar E. Erickson, state insurance commissioner, innocent of charges of "crimes, corrupt conduct, malfeasance, and misdemeanors in office."

Starting their balloting shortly after closing arguments of counsel this afternoon, the senate rapidly voted on each of the 10 specifications contained in the articles of impeachment voted by the house of representatives.

The vote on both specifications contained in charge 1 was 29 to 20, with a two-thirds vote of the senate's 49 man membership necessary to convict. Charge 1, specification 1, claimed the purchase of a $200,000 hail reinsurance policy from Lloyds of London at a total cost of $124,992 in 1943 was illegal in that it was without legislative authorization. Specification 2 of the same charge alleged that Erickson aided in obtaining illegally an $8,500 "service fee" on this policy for R. N. Crawford & Co., Inc., "and other persons unknown." The rest of the 10 specifications concerned alleged "kickbacks" from insurance agents.

Parcel post service, subject to former rates and conditions, will be resumed immediately to Gabon in French Africa, he added.

THRONG SALUTES 4 NEW JUDGES TAKING OFFICE

Governor and Mayor at Ceremonies

Families, friends, business associates, and public officials assembled for the induction of four newly elected judges of Superior and Circuit courts filled courtrooms and corridors of the seventh and eighth floors of the county building yesterday.

The ceremonies were started in the flower decked courtroom of Judge Julius H. Miner, chief justice of the Circuit court, where Gov. Green presented a certificate of judgeship to Elmer J. Schnackenberg, who will sit in Circuit court. Schnackenberg is a former speaker of the state house of representatives. Among those who attended were Mrs. Hazel Schnackenberg, wife of the judge; Mrs. Lyman Cherry, his daughter, and three sons, Elmer, Roy, and Lt. Frank.

Governor and Mayor Attend

Gov. Green also attended the induction of Judge Edwin A. Robson, newly elected to the Superior bench, in the courtroom of Judge John F. Haas. Judge Robson's wife, mother, and three sons heard him receive congratulations.

Mayor Kelly attended induction ceremonies for Judge John M. Tuohy and Judge Charles E. Byrne of Superior court. Atty. Thomas C. Donovan presided at the induction of Judge Tuohy.

At the annual meeting of Circuit and Superior court judges an assignment precedent was broken when Judge Harold G. Ward of Superior court was permitted to remain as chief justice of Criminal court.

Judges Byrne and William J. Lindsay of Superior court also were assigned to Criminal court.

Changes in Superior Court

Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley of Superior court will retain his post until his term expires Dec. 1. Judge John P. McGoorty of Superior court was renamed head of the chancery division and Judge Robert E. Crowe, of the Superior court's law division. Also in the chancery division will be Judge Donald S. McKinlay and Judge John J. Lupe, the latter replacing Judge John C. Lewe, who has been appointed to Appellate court. Superior Court Judges Frank M. Padden, Robson, and Peter H. Schwaba were assigned to the divorce division.

In the Circuit court, Judge Robert Jerome Dunne was named chief justice. Judge Miner will sit in the divorce division. Judge Philip J. Finnegan was named head of the chancery division and Judge William V. Brothers head of the law division.

GREEN'S DEMAND FOR 2 TAX BILLS HAILED BY CLARK

County Assessor Clark yesterday praised Gov. Green for urgently demanding passage in the state legislature of two bills that would equalize tax assessments in each Illinois county and also over the whole state.

The governor in his statement on Thursday asserted that Clark's announcement that he would assess Cook county on a ratio of 20 per cent of full value [the present standard is 100 per cent] would throw the state's taxing machinery into chaos. No one man, the governor added, should have such broad powers.

"I heartily agree with the governor on all he said," said Clark. "No man should have authority so broad. Illinois taxing procedure is a hodgepodge, a crazyquilt, and the only way to make it right is to have all property assessed at full fair value, as the constitution orders. The two bills will accomplish that end."

He added he would persist in his adoption of the 20 per cent factor unless the bills, drawn after long investigation by a legislative committee headed by Sen. Walker Butler [R., Chicago], are put thru.

DOG FIGHT AT N.U. LAB RESULTS IN BUNDESEN QUIZ

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, yesterday called members of the dog advisory committee to a meeting at 10 a. m. Tuesday to hear charges of inhumane treatment of dogs in the laboratory of Northwestern university's medical school.

Mrs. Charles M. Petkus, an official of the Illinois Citizens' Animal Welfare league, requested the meeting.

Mrs. Petkus and two other women engaged in a controversy Tuesday with Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, physiologist, when they attempted to remove a dog from the laboratory. The women said the dog was being mistreated. Mrs. Charles C. Rutson charged she was knocked down in a scuffle with Dr. Ivy.

Gloria Welsh, 14, of 5416 Pensacola av., and Edward Waybright, 16, of 3916½ N. Kedvale av., whose marriage in Kentucky after an elopement was annulled, slipped away to Waukegan on May 13 and were remarried, it was disclosed yesterday.

Juvenile authorities yesterday took the youthful couple before Judge Fsank Bicek in Juvenile court. Both promised they would not live together until Gloria is 18. They were released in custody of their parents.

After annulment of their first marriage March 29, the court decreed that Edward might visit his former wife at her home on Sundays. Now that they are married again the same arrangement will continue.

THE YELLOW KID TRIES A FAST ONE AND IT REBOUNDS

Joseph [Yellow Kid] Weil, one of the nation's most fabulous confidence men of the last four decades who says he is retired, failed to put one over yesterday.

One of the organizers of the Voice of the Nation, a forum "to expose world fraud," Weil announced he would appear with Melchoir Palyi, book reviewer, traveler, and lecturer, at the first meeting of the Voice this evening in the Glickman College of Fine Arts. Palyi was to discuss "Russia's Future Relationship with Japan," and Weil, "The Fiasco at San Francisco."

Palyi, however, refused to appear with Weil. "The Yellow Kid may know a lot about international swindles, but I doubt if he is able to discuss international affairs," Palyi explained. "To appear with Weil in a serious discussion would be a joke."

ODT GIVES CITY 200 NEW CARS AND 195 BUSES

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK

Officials of the Chicago Surface Lines announced yesterday that the office of defense transportation and the war production board had authorized releases on 195 new buses and 200 street cars that the lines have had on order for months.

John E. Sullivan, chairman of the management board, said the cars would cost $4,400,000 and the buses $2,119,000. Payment is to be made from the lines' renewal funds. Judge Michael Igoe of federal District court, in charge of the property in bankruptcy, authorized the expenditures.

"Fourteen of the 195 buses have been received," Sullivan said. "More are expected this summer, and acceleration of deliveries is looked for by fall. We hope to get all the buses before the end of the year.

Hopes for Cars This Year

"The first street cars are scheduled for delivery early in 1946, but we may get some of this new equipment before Christmas."

The new buses, Sullivan said, incorporate the latest developments in bus construction. Several companies are making them. Thirty-five will be of the small 27 passenger type suitable for use on lightly traveled routes. The remainder will seat from 36 to 45 passengers and will have wide entrances and exits. All will be single deckers.

The cars, Sullivan said, are to be made by the Pullman Standard Car company and the St. Louis Car company. They will be improved models of the vehicles now being operated in Madison st.

Facts About New Cars

The Chicago cars on order will be of light weight metal, seat 59 passengers, and be virtually noiseless. Their length will be 50 feet 6 inches, eight feet longer than the old vintage cars, but aproximately the same length as that of those on Madison st. They will be nine feet wide, three inches broader than Madison st. trolley cars. This increase in width was incorporated to make standing passengers more comfortable.

The new and Madison st. cars have the same seating capacity. The semi-modern vehicles on the Clark-Howard line seat 60, but the old vintage trolleys seat only 40.

Loading and unloading arrangements are improved: passengers enter at the rear and may leave either at the front or thru a side door. All doors are electrically operated.

Fast loading is one important element of over-all speed; another is fast and steady acceleration. A powerful motor is attached to each of the car's four axles and delivers

New type street cars for Chicago lines

Triple Brake System

The new cars will have three braking systems, all controled by one lever. They are described as motor retardation, spring applied drum brakes, and—at the end—seizure of the rails by magnetic track brakes.

All bodies are of welded stainless steel. Despite increased size, each new car will weigh 38,000 pounds, compared with 48,000 for the ancient type.

Thru an ingenious arrangement, heat developed in braking is saved and in winter blown by fans into ventilators. There is no other device for heating. Among minor improvements will be small high windows for standing patrons, better ventilation, and a windshield of special type that will not let inside lights interfere with the motorman's vision.

The new cars will cost $22,200 each; the Madison st. cars cost approximately $16,000 eight years ago.

GANDHI TO 'STEP ASIDE' ON INDIAN FREEDOM MOVE

BOMBAY, India, June 15 (AP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi said today that the time has come when he must step aside as the leader of India's independence movement.

In a statement issued after the British freed the eight imprisoned members of the national congress' working committee, the 76 year old leader said:

"For several years I acted as advisor to the congress whenever required. Now that the members of the working committee are free I can only give them my advice and it is they who have to shape the policy of the congress and to speak and act with authority.

"At this point I must stop, and the working committee has to take up the thread. It is time for the members to declare the mind of the congress on impending questions."

Only an Adviser

Gandhi said he had telegraphed Field Marshal Wavell, the viceroy, that he was only an adviser and had no standing as recognized representative of the Congress party.

The Hindu Nationalist and religious leader said that Maulana Abdul Kalan Azad, Congress party president, had been omitted from the list of Indians invited to a conference at Simla June 25 to consider the new British offer of more Indian government posts for Indians.

Only Kalan Azad, Gandhi said, could speak with authority for the party.

Kalan Azad was released from internment today. It was believed that the British failed to invite him thru an oversight, and that an invitation would be sent to him shortly.

Gandhi has been a driving force in the struggle for Indian freedom for more than 40 years.

Nehru Among Freed

Pandit Jawaharal Nehru and Sardar Vallabhai Patel, both former presidents of the Congress party, were among the others freed.

[The Indian freedom campaign committee in Britain announced approval of release of the eight, but demanded liberty for all political prisoners in Indian jails and "complete independence." It stated: "Membership in the executive council does not mean a responsible Indian government. The executive council is not responsible to the Indian legislative assembly. Even if it were, the assembly is not democratically elected."]

All Jinnah Asks Delay

LONDON, June 16 [Saturday]—(AP)—An Associated Press dispatch from Bombay said that Mahommed Ali Jinnah, Moslem league president, pledging the Mohammedans' cooperation and good will, had asked that the British-Indian conference be postponed for two weeks to permit fuller discussion of the situation by the league's executive committee.

Jinnah, first Indian political leader to comment on the British offer, said he hoped the Mohammedans would contribute to any just interim settlement of the Indian problem. It was generally believed the Simla conferees would accept yesterday's British white paper proposal. A report from Lucknow said that Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, released from three years imprisonment, declared that the fundamental objectives of the Congress party were "Indian independence and freedom."

San Francisco, Cal., June 15—The statute of a new international court of justice, almost identical with the old world court, was adopted today at a drowsy public meeting of the allied nations conference commission on judicial organization.

All members of the security organization being chartered here will be members of the new court but only those 26 who were subjected to the jurisdiction of the world court will be immediately subject to the new one. It will be optional with the other nations represented here, including the United States, to accept the jurisdiction of the new court. The commission approved a recommendation offered by Iran, and indorsed by Australia, that the conference ask the members to make declarations recognizing the obligatory jurisdiction of the court.

Two Committees at Work

The provisions for the new world court were reported to the commission by two committees, one headed by Manuel Gallagher of Peru and the other by Abdel Hamid Pasha Badawi of Egypt.

Caracciolo Parra Perez, president of the court commission, said the statute of the court consists of 70 articles in five chapters and asked the commission members if they wanted it read or if they would approve it as submitted in writing by the committee. The delegates, many of them fanning themselves with their hats in the midst of a San Francisco "heat wave" of 80 degrees, indicating they did not want it read.

Will Sit at Hague

The court will be seated at the Hague, the Netherlands, and will consist of 15 judges, no two of whom may be nationals of the same country. They will be elected by the general assembly and by the security council for nine year terms. The court will be permanently in session.

Questions of international law, interpretations of treaties, breaches of international obligations, and questions relating to the nature or extent of the reparations to be made for breaches of international obligations will fall within the jurisdiction of the court.

In one respect it has been called stronger than the world court: It may refer failures of parties to comply with court rulings to the security council.

DEWEY TO VISIT TRUMAN JUNE 25 FOR CONFERENCE

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—Gov. Dewey of New York will confer with President Truman at the White House at 11 a. m. June 25, Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said today.

Ross' announcement followed a disclosure some weeks ago that the 1944 Republican Presidential nominee and former Gov. Alf. M. Landon, 1936 nominee, had been invited to call on the President any time they are in Washington. No date has been set for the Landon visit.

Fixed for June 25, the Dewey meeting indicates that the President expects to be back from the closing session of the San Francisco conference by that time.

Marine Honored by President

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—Three marines and an army private received the congressional medal of honor from President Truman today in a ceremony at the White House.

The marines were Maj. Everett P. Pope of Wollaston, Mass., 1st Lt. Carlton R. Rouh of Lindenwold, N. J., and Pvt. Luther Skaggs of Henderson, Ky. The army man was Pvt. Geno J. Merli, Peckville, Pa.

Pope, 26, won his medal for leading his men in an assault on a strategic hill on Peleliu Island in September, 1944. With rocks and bare fists, Pope held the hill after his ammunition ran low.

Rouh was cited for risking his life to save two comrades from a Japanese grenade on Peleliu Island Sept. 15, 1944.

Skaggs was critically wounded when a Japanese grenade exploded in his foxhole July 21, 1944, on a Guam beachhead. Instead of summoning a corpsman and revealing his outfit's position, he applied a tourniquet to his shattered leg and fought on for eight hours.

Merli received the medal for feigning death under probing German bayonets and then continued to fire his machine gun during a battle Sept. 4-15, 1944, near Lars La Bruyere, Belgium.

RUSSIA STARTS NEW DISPUTE AT FRISCO PARLEY

lacked a two-thirds majority with votes of 23 to 17, and so were defeated. The Big Four swung their support successfully against any definite provision for revision of the charter.

French Motion Beaten

France then moved a revision conference within 10 years flat. This motion failed with 28 for it, 17 against and 5 not voting.

Thereupon, Sen. Connally [D., Tex.] of the American delegation came up with a proposal to mollify the little nations. He suggested as a compromise that the question of convening a revision conference be placed on the agenda of the league's general assembly at its 10th annual meeting. It was agreed to vote on this motion at another meeting of the committee late tonight and the indications were that it would be adopted.

There was a lot of heated discussion before and after Connally's proposed compromise.

Canadian Ambassador Pearson pointed out that the question whether a big power can veto an amendment of the charter at any time has not been settled yet.

Calls It "Gift Horse"

"Don't deflate this gift horse [Connally proposal] too much till the question of vetoing an amendment is disposed of," he urged.

"The American proposal [Connally's] is not sufficient compensation for what we lost in the veto fight," snorted Colombian Foreign Minister Camargo.

Then the colloquy proceeded:

South Africa: "We yielded on the veto. We are entitled to get this small concession from the big powers."

Chile: "We are struck by the obstinate refusal of the great powers to yield on this point."

New Zealand: "We still hope for more than is offered in this compromise."

"A definite time limit is not practical," said the Russian delegate. "It would force members to do something they might not want to do."

Halifax for Compromise

"The American proposal fixes a limit," said British Ambassador Halifax. "The secretary general would put it on the agenda at the 10th annual assembly and if he doesn't, I suggest that the combined efforts of the British commonwealth governments might operate to put it on. It will have a substantial effect on public opinion, which is the master of us all. It would be unwise to underrate its appeal."

On June 23 President Truman is scheduled to witness the signing of the charter by 50 nations and then deliver an address, broadcast to the world, dedicating the newest undertaking to prevent the recurrence of war. Mr. Truman will speak between 7 and 7:30 p. m. Chicago time.

Mr. Truman and his party are to arrive by airplane at Hamilton field, the United States army airport, the afternoon of June 22.

The Presidential party is to motor to the Fairmont hotel, headquarters of the American delegation on Nob hill, where he would meet the 500 delegates of the 50 nations at a reception in his honor.

That evening Mr. Truman is slated to attend a small dinner given by Mr. Stettinius, at which the other principal guests will be the members of the American delegation.

Plans to Attend Reception

On June 23 there is to be a small reception at which the members of Mayor Lapham's united nations conference committee will be presented to the President.

The President then is to proceed to the Civic Opera house for the closing session of the conference.

The only important part of the league's charter yet to be completed is the chapter on trusteeships for conquered and other territories committed for administration to the international organization.

The trusteeship chapter is now complete with the exception of the declaration of general policy relating to colonies. Great Britain, the United States, France, and China have reached an agreement pledging eventual freedom for colonial peoples but Russia is yet to be heard from.

A Big Five meeting and a meeting of the trusteeship committee of the conference scheduled for today were postponed when Russian Ambassador Gromyko reported he had not received instructions from Moscow regarding the declaration of policy.

Brig Gen. Romulo, chief of the Philippines delegation, who had demanded a pledge of independence for colonial peoples, said he would accept the compromise. He said that while not mentioning independence specifically, the phraseology upon which general agreement had been reached means all that the word independence means. He himself, in the give and take of the negotiations, had suggested the phrase "political aspirations of the people" and also "free political institutions."

The compromise was made necessary by the adamantine opposition of the British to any mention of the term "independence" in that part of the trusteeship chapter relating to colonies.

TRUMAN TO GO TO BERLIN FOR BIG 3 MEETING

British Force Disclosure of Parley Site

BY WALTER TROHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 15—The White House tonight announced that the Truman-Churchill-Stalin meeting, which will lay the foundation for the peace conference, will be held in the vicinity of Berlin.

No date was given for the meeting. However, it has been made clear by two of the Big Three leaders that the conference will be held in the near future.

President Truman at his news conference Wednesday indicated the meeting would not begin later than July 17. Prime Minister Churchill told the house of commons it would come between July 5, the date of the British elections, and July 26, the date the election results are to be officialy announced.

The disclosure of the approximate site of the meeting was forced by the British. Maj. Clement Attlee, deputy prime minister until the British elections were called, disclosed in London that the Big Three meeting would take place in Berlin.

No Surprise in Capital

Following this disclosure White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters, "in view of the British announcement I will say that the meeting of the Big Three will take place in the vicinity of Berlin."

The announcement came as no surprise in Washington. It was widely expected that the impending conference would follow the general rule of the two previous meetings of the heads of the major powers and be on Russian soil or territory within the soviet sphere of influence.

The first Big Three meeting was held when the late President Roosevelt met with Stalin and Churchill at Tehran in Iran late in 1943. The second meeting was held at Yalta in Russian Crimea early this year.

Exchange of Letters

LONDON, June 15 (AP)—The first revelation that the impending meeting of Prime Minister Churchill, President Truman, and Marshal Stalin would be held in Berlin came in an exchange of letters today between Churchill and Clement Attlee, British Labor party leader. Later, tonight, an announcement from Churchill's official residence at No. 10 Downing st. confirmed the choice of the ruined capital of the dead German reich as the conference site.

Attlee, in accepting Churchill's offer to attend the conference as a "friend and counselor," let out the secret of the parley site by using the phrase "prospective conference in Berlin" in his letter to the prime minister.

Question Inspires Letter

Attlee's letter resulted from a question raised as to his role in the Big Three discussions.

Harold Laski, Labor party chairman, said last night that Attlee should attend only in the role of observer without binding the Labor party on any decisions taken.

Churchill, who previously had announced in parliament that he was inviting Attlee to accompany him to the meeting, in his letter to Attlee made plain that the government would "of course bear responsibility for all decisions."

"But my idea was that you [Attlee] should come as a friend and counselor and help us on all the subjects on which we have been so long agreed and have been known to be agreed by public declaration."

Attlee accepted the invitation "on the basis which you have set out" and added "there was never any suggestions that I should go as a mere observer."

The reason for the careful delineation of Attlee's position in the discussions is that if the Labor party wins in the current political campaign he might be the prime minister to whom would fall the task of carrying out the Berlin parley agreements.

VOLUNTEER PLAN FAILS IN CANADA, PAPER CHARGES

OTTAWA, Ontario, June 15 (AP)—Canada's system of voluntary enlistment for the war against Japan "is failing to meet the need promptly," the conservative, pro-conscriptionist Montreal Gazette declared in an editorial today.

Pointing out that the Canadian objective of raising 30,000 troops for the Pacific was still 2,500 short, the Gazette declared that "it would appear that even before we enter the new phase of the war, we have encountered our old difficulties."

"Apparently," the paper said, "only an extended deadline will enable minimum requirements to be reached. But if it will be so difficult to reach the minimum requirements, how will the necessary reënforcements be obtained and maintained?"

Referring to last fall's conscription crisis when the Liberal government was almost overthrown over the problem of raising reënforcements for the infantry forces in Europe, the Gazette continued:

"The failure of the 'reënforcement pools,' which was at the core of the man power difficulties last year, may well arise again. And if the needed reënforcements cannot be raised by voluntary enlistments, what is the government then to do?"

In last year's crisis, the government adopted partial conscription to meet the problem, drafting 16,000 troops from the home defense army which had declined to volunteer for service abroad. The move rocked anti-conscriptionist Quebec, where it was called a "betrayal" of the French people, and was attacked in opposition quarters as an inadequate compromise.

DRAFT VIOLATOR'S SENTENCE SUSPENDED
Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan yesterday ordered Henry Irving Sternberg, 40, of New York, freed from a 60 day sentence imposed for violating selective service regulations. The sentence was suspended when Sternberg pleaded he wanted to join his wife, who, he said, soon will become a mother.

HOPES OF EARLY SENATE VOTE ON CHARTER FADING

BY PHILIP DODD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 15—Administration hopes for early senate ratification of the charter of the world security organization were dimmed today by reports of delays in the San Francisco conference and rising senate opposition to an early vote.

Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.] arrived today from Europe with a senate committee and said European problems should be settled before final action is taken on an international organization to preserve peace.

"I have always felt," Wheeler told reporters, "that there ought to be a lot of straightening out of European problems before a vote is taken on the so-called charter.

"The peace treaty should come first."

Republicans Hesitant

Reports from San Francisco that completion of the security organization charter may be delayed until June 23 and possibly later has led senate leaders to reconsider their plans for rushing the charter thru the senate before the summer recess of congress, it was learned on good authority.

Last week, when it was believed the San Francisco conference would conclude next Wednesday, President Truman told administration leaders in the senate he would send the charter to the senate June 25 for immediate action.

Majority Leader Barkley [D., Ky.] and Minority Leader White [R., Me] announced they were willing to postpone the summer recess, Barkley asserting it might be possible to complete action of the charter by July 15. Some Republican senators, however, favor delaying senate action until fall to permit public discussion.

Wants Soviets To Be First

Sen. Robertson [R., Wyo.] in a statement today declared the United States should not be the first to ratify the charter, as proposed by Barkley, but should be the last to approve the document.

"I would like the first nation to ratify to be Soviet Russia," Robertson said.

Robertson said that in any case he saw no need for hurry in American ratification. Many senators have no knowledge of what is in the charter so there should be ample time allowed for study and careful consideration, he said.

DE GAULLE VISIT TO TRUMAN NEAR, PARIS REPORTS

PARIS, June 15 (AP)—It was said in official quarters today that Gen. de Gaulle has canceled all engagements after June 18 in order to be able to leave for the United States. He was said to be hoping to fly to Washington as soon as President Truman's schedule permits him to discuss some of France's problems.

An authoritative informant asserted that the recent American note told France that the United States government was prepared to discuss the Syrian and other problems at the earliest possible moment. [Paris informants have reported an American note replying to France's invitation to a five power conference on middle eastern problems.]

It was said that no formal American invitation has been sent to De Gaulle to go to Washington.

YANK DIVISION UNWILLING HOST TO FRAU GOERING

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

PARIS, June 15—The 19th American infantry division is presently serving as the rather unwilling host to Frau Emmy Sonnemann Goering, the hefty German actress and wife of the Nazi leader, who arrived in style at Neustadt, southeast of Neurenberg, three days ago bearing an order issued by a major general of the STAEF staff instructing military personnel to render all assistance to her and party.

The wife of Goering, whose loot from Paris clothed her in the style of one of Europe's best dressed women, is sojourning in one of her husband's many villas under a 24 hour guard placed by the puzzled divisional command.

On June 12 she showed up in state. Her party included one Mercedes Benz automobile and one 2½ ton truck containing food and other supplies sufficient for 30 days.

Japs Report B-29s Sow Mines in Sea Near Tokyo

Truman Pledges Stalin Co-operation for Peace

New York, June 15 (AP)—President Truman, acknowledging Premier Stalin's message of gratitude earlier this week for American lend-lease aid during the war against Germany, pledged the United States government to continue the same "friendly coöperation" in efforts to establish a lasting peace, the Soviet Tass agency said today.

make Dad your Chin-up Pin-up...

give him a tie that's KNOT-PLANNED

DAD will walk around with his head in the clouds if you give him two or three of these good-looking Knot-planned ties Sunday!

THESE TIES are very out-of-the-ordinary for their designs are so spaced that they always show completely and never get tangled with the knot!

NOT ONLY THAT--but their large random patterns are hand-printed!

IF YOU WANT something really new and unusually smart, select several of these and watch Dad's reaction when you present them to him on Father's Day.

DELEGATES GET INTO SMALL WAR ON 'GOOD FAITH'

BY WILLIAM MOORE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., June 15 — Jesus Mario Yepes of Colombia came out for good faith today at the international conference to plan peace. His idea started a small war at a public session of the commission on preamble, purposes and principles in the San Francisco opera house.

Chairman Manuilsky of the Soviet Ukrainian delegation shifted from Russian to French to demand who was talking about good faith and accused the small nations of bad faith on the veto question. Various delegates sprang up to retort in several languages the equivalent of "Who, me?"

Sen. Rolin of France, who'd put on his army uniform to preside at the meeting, took some verbal swings at Manuilsky. Foreign Minister Evatt of Australia, who pronounces it "good fithe," threw some vocal Sunday punches at the gray haired cherubic Ukrainian.

All Are for It

And then the peace loving delegates remembered what they'd come for and all clambered aboard the principle of good faith.

The commission was hurrying thru the adoption of the international charter chapters on purposes and principles when Yepes [pronounced approximately "Yippee,"] arose to demand that the charter say the nations would fulfill their obligations "in full good faith" as well as according to the rules.

"Senors," he said in Spanish, "let's not put our light under a bushel."

Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of the American delegation said reference to good faith had been omitted because it had been taken for granted. But she said she'd learned since that Latin Americans write good faith into all agreements [it's an idea that comes from the old Roman law] and she now thought good faith should be included.

Rolin, who's as likely to speak English as French, announced that Manuilsky would speak against the good faith proposal. Manuilsky crossed him up; spoke for it.

"We thought," said Manuilsky, shrugging his left shoulder without shrugging his right, "the principle of good faith was so simple and elementary it didn't need to be mentioned. But since Yalta, some of those present here have tried to violate the Yalta agreement [On the veto]."

Turning on a radiant smile and a chilly voice, he went on:

"Now we ask why at the very beginning of the conference you tried to violate the Yalta agreement. The distinguished delegate from Colombia, Mr. Yepes, was one of those who tried.

"So we support a declaration of good faith."

Quibble Over Yalta

Rolin sprang up to deny that Yepes or any other delegate had tried to break the Yalta formula. Most of the countries weren't represented at Yalta, Rolin said, and so were not bound by the agreement.

Dominion Secretary Cranborne of Britain came to the defense of Yepes' amendment, telling the delegates, "if you want it, we'll fight for it."

Recalling the long conference delays caused by the Soviet delegates over attempts to establish what the Yalta formula meant, Evatt said:

"Yalta's a long way from San Francisco. We shouldn't go to Yalta this morning. There was no attempt to change the formula, but to find out what it meant.

"It was enlightening to find out after several weeks from those who wrote it just what it did mean."

Everybody agreed to vote for the amendment, and then somebody told Yepes that it was gilding the lily to say "full good faith." "Good faith" would do. He replied in Spanish, a trifle more formally than this, that it was okay by him—positively okey-doke.

Highway Police Seize 4 in Evanston Policy Raid

Four Negroes were arrested and policy game paraphernalia was confiscated last night by Chief John J. McGinnis of the sheriff's highway police in the fifth policy game raid in Evanston in four months. The men were arrested in a house at 1940 Jackson st., Evanston, and the gambling equipment seized in the home of Archie Searles, 42, of 1108½ Clark st., Evanston. Those arrested were booked to appear in Morton Grove highway court on June 20 and released on $100 bonds.

THE QUESTION

In what way would you like to follow in your father's footsteps?

WHERE ASKED

Army Air Forces Air Power show, Marshall Field & Co. store.

THE ANSWERS

Robert Ludmann, 13, of 5 Wisner av., Park Ridge—Well, my dad was pretty brave in the last war. I'd like to have as much courage as he has. He's a sensible man, a good provider, and lots of fun, too. He has a terrific sense of humor and is intelligent. He's always worked for everything he got and he got what he went after.

Jay Underhill, 13, of 416 E. Roosevelt rd., Wheaton—I would like to be a successful real estate man like my dad and would like to have my tenants think as much of me as his do of him. I want a nice office like he has and want to be as courteous as he is. He's a pretty good golfer, too, and I'd be proud to play as well.

Burton Hendrickson, 12, of 322 S. Homan av.—My dad is a printer and I want to be one, too. Above all else, I want to be as ambitious as he is. He works, and works, and works, and always has energy for more work. Even tho he works hard he has time to be considerate and understanding. Those are good qualities that I want to have.

Jack Schrock, 12, of Geneva—Just the way my father acts is wonderful! He's a regular pal to me and I am sure he is a pal to every one. He doesn't waste time, has good judgment, and makes quick, accurate decisions. He flies a plane, plays the piano, and sings. Confidentially, I don't want to sing like he does!

John Woodworth, 14, of 1734 Madison st.—My dad knows a lot about fish and has a job in which he gets to travel all around the country. I think that would be an interesting way to spend my life and hope some day I know as much about his business as he does I'd like to be able to tap dance the way he does.

Dick Lacey, 12, of Centralia, Ill.—My dad is a good father and I hope I will be like him. Dad grows fruit down in southern Illinois and I would be happy if I knew half as much about it as he does. I would like to be as good a motorist as he is—and wish I could swim like he can. He knows race horses, too.

BARE HITLER'S WAR CAVERNS IN MOUNTAINS

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MUNICH, Germany, June 15 — Gradually, as we study Germany more closely, we are discovering new reasons why Hitler and his chieftains believed that they could continue the war despite resounding defeats.

They were completing giant plants underground and inside mountains in which they were confident that they could forge new weapons out of the reach of our bombers and our armies. Today I inspected the first underground oil refinery we discovered hidden under a mountain near Ebensee in a distant valley in Austria, which was only one link in a vast network of plants of all descriptions on which Hitler counted for victory.

The refinery is still working, and within the next three days the Americans controling this section will supply the plant in the mountain with crude oil to enable it to produce fuel which will be distributed under our direction.

Fantasy to Reality

German fairy tales are full of stories about mountains that open up, caves from which sinister figures emerge to do powerful man's bidding and slaves ready to toil for him. Hitler turned fantasy into seeming reality when he found that the most efficient plants in Germany were being crippled by bombs. He ordered the "economic research institute of Berlin" to devise bomb proof plants in all parts of Germany.

At first the experts concentrated on hideouts for Germany's aircraft industries. They evolved a gigantic underground plant at Nordhausen for the mass production of V-1's and V-2's. In a mountain near Kahla and in Bad Eschenlohe near Garmisch they built underground plants for the production of the jet propelled ME-262, which Hitler considered the best plane developed in this war.

Then the German experts tired of tunneling in mountains and decided to build their own hills over the plants. In Muehldorf, near Munich, engineers placed huge concrete, arched hangars on top of ground piled to fit the hangar. Then the ground was dug from under this arched hangar massed on top of it.

A Bomb Proof Hall

Thus the Germans achieved a bomb proof hall which was 280 feet wide and 600 feet deep. Everything was in readiness to manufacture an adjoining second unit the same size. What the Germans planned to manufacture in this hill we do not know because they had to surrender before production could be started. Similar plants were started near Landsberg on the Lech river.

After bombers crippled the German luftwaffe by smashing synthetic oil plants and oil reserves, the Germans devised a program known as the Geilenberg program to provide the oil needed by the luftwaffe. The project called for the creation of 35 plants, most of which were to be hidden underground or in mountains.

Expense Not Considered

The Germans talked a great deal about underground plants shortly before the outbreak of war. None of the men I interviewed was able to explain why they delayed construction until a year and a half ago.

The plants involved in the Geilenberg program would have been sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the German army fighting in the redoubt but not for the full army. To date we have found no evidence that the Germans built underground synthetic oil plants.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

A medley of tunes from the currently popular Broadway musical, "Bloomer Girl," will be included. Bruce Foote, baritone, and Penny Perry, soprano, will be the vocal soloists. Sondra Gair will head the dramatic cast and John Mallow will be the narrator. Jack La Frandre is the writer-producer.

ENGLAND AGAIN FILLING LARDER FROM DENMARK

Butter, Eggs and Meat Being Shipped

BY HAL FOUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 15—Butter, bacon, eggs, and meat are being shipped to Britain, a prewar customer, from Denmark, which did much to feed Germany for five years. The quantities, it was said here, would ease the skimping in American households were it not that all Europe is hungry.

The Danish agricultural council, representing this country's closely organized farmers and coöperatives, said that 1945 exports will approximate 120,000,000 pounds of butter, 231,000,000 pounds of bacon, 82,000,000 pounds of other meats, and 7,000,000 pounds of eggs. An allied nations mission will manage distribution among armies and distressed peoples. Prices are being negotiated in London.

Third of Pre-War Volume

This mouth watering tonnage of food is approximately a third of the pre-war export volume, according to Kai Johansen of the agricultural council. He said that it will take about three years for farmers to recover the pre-war production rate, cut during the war by lack of fertilizers, feeds, machinery and transport.

The progress of agriculture is the main economic concern in Denmark, with a third of its 4,000,000 population dependent upon the soil. In Copenhagen, with a fourth of the country's population, the main concern is the fuel shortage. For want of coal and petroleum, houses are unheated during the cold spring rains, factories are idle, ships are gathering rust at the docks, and streetcars do not operate between 9 p. m. and 6 a. m.

Still Signs of War

However, the once gay city glories in its comparative abundance of food while it struggles toward normalcy. Parliament is in session and has ordered an audit of all bank accounts for confiscation of profits derived from business with the Nazis during German occupation. Ten thousand alleged collaborators have been arrested, including Gunnar Larsen, minister of public works. Newspapers are giving much space to the current trial of a former grocer, Henning Brondum, as a muscle man for Hitler in Copenhagen.

The once beautiful city parks are now nests of air raid shelters and statues are still boxed in brick or sand and lumber as protection against bombs.

Despite a heavy rain some 250 persons gathered at the Foster av. beach last night to witness the first public demonstration by the navy of rockets. A combat unit of veterans from the South Pacific demonstrated the firing. The team fired 48 rounds of various types of rockets in barrage, single rail and tri-rail salvos. The demonstration, which is in promotion of the 7th war loan drive, will be repeated at the Foster beach tonight and tomorrow. On June 18, 19, and 20 the show will move to the 63d st. beach. FAMILIES TO GET CHANCE TO JOIN GI's IN EUROPE

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—The war department promised today to allow families and fiancees of service men in occupied Europe to join them "when conditions permit."

In a letter to Rep. Smith [R., Me.], John W. Martyn, administrative assistant to War Secretary Stimson, said:

"You may be confident that the war department is fully aware of the desirability of dependents and fiancees proceeding to Europe and will certainly relax the present restrictions when conditions permit."

The congresswoman, in a previous letter, had suggested that wives be permitted to join husbands who are assigned for an indefinite stay or a period of one year or more. She said her proposals would include fiancees who would go to Europe for the purpose of marrying and remaining with their husbands.

She said her proposal is "prompted by my desire to prevent further disintegration of the American home and the American family life."

IKE BACKS PLAN FOR UNIVERSAL ARMY TRAINING

BY LAURENCE BURD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 15—Gen. Eisenhower today advocated creation of a post-war citizens' reserve army thru compulsory military training as the war department submitted to congress its plan for a peace time training program.

A letter from Eisenhower indorsing peace time conscription was sent to the house committee on post-war military policy, which also heard the testimony from war department chiefs, including War Secretary Stimson, who indorsed universal military training.

Eisenhower said "fairness to the country and to the individual's chances of survival in war" demand that able bodied young men be given military training in peace time.

Cites Need for "Numbers"

The supreme allied commander declared the need for "numbers" in battle has been proven in the present war, but asserted any attempt to maintain a huge full time professional army would be so costly as to be "unsupportable." Stating that training of a reserve army is the most efficient and economical means of preparedness, he said "the whole concept of organization should be one involving the 'citizens forces' idea."

The war department's plan for a peace time training program was submitted to the house group, headed by Rep. Woodrum [D., Va.], by Maj. Gen. William F. Tompkins, director of the army's special planning division.

He proposed that young men between the ages of 17 and 20 be given one continuous year of training. The age limits should be flexible, he explained, so young men could take their training in so far as possible without disrupting their educations.

Quarterly Inductions

Trainees would be inducted on a quarterly basis—four times a year—in order to make maximum use of training facilities and personnel, he explained.

The plan provides that men completing the one year of training would become members of an "active reserve" for a five year period, subject to call only in the event of a national emergency declared by congress.

Stimson advocated immediate congressional adoption of a universal training plan as a "necessary foundation on which to build the security of the United States."

"Unless we are now willing to adopt a permanent program of universal military training we shall be gambling with the future security of our national inheritance," he told the committee.

U. S.-BRITAIN CENSORSHIP OF MAIL IS ENDED

Washington, June 15 (AP)—The censoring of mail between the United States and the United Kingdom ended today.

It was confirmed at the office of censorship that the termination has been made effective this morning.

Other international mail censorship continues.

BRITAIN'S SWORD AND SHIELD

The decision to keep three American armies in Germany at least until December is a political decision. Obviously, the only purpose it can serve is to confront the Russians with a force that they cannot lightly ignore.

The original plan was to keep only two American armies in our zone of occupation, and even this force was excessive from a strictly military viewpoint. If the purpose of our occupation were merely to make certain that the Germans in our zone were disarmed, demobilized, and rendered incapable of resisting the terms of peace we mean to impose an army corps would be more than equal to the task.

It is true, of course, that millions of men cannot be moved out of Europe in a few days. Inevitably there will be a considerable American force in Europe for many weeks to come. The point to be borne in mind, however, is that only a short time ago the army command was persuaded that it could bring back all but two of our armies. Now it has decided to keep three in Germany. The number of ships available has not changed, nor their carrying capacity. The alteration in plans must have been dictated by something other than the physical facts regarding transport facilities.

All of this doesn't mean, of course, that some one in Washington has decided to fight the Russians. It does suggest, however, that our diplomats have concluded that they will need a sizable stack of chips in the European poker game.

From the American viewpoint the game is a queer one. We sent our armies to Europe to protect Britain from Germany. That job is finished. We are now keeping an enormous force in Germany to protect Britain from Russia and to discourage Russia from organizing Europe against Britain. Our stakes are on the table, but we don't stand to gain anything of direct value to us, no matter how the play goes.

In the midst of all this realpolitik the gentlemen at San Francisco continue to elaborate their beautiful document. To hear them tell it, you would think that force is no longer to have a determining influence in international affairs. If Mr. Stettinius really believed that, our government would not have announced an increase in our armed might in Europe just before the preliminary conference to be attended by Messrs. Truman, Stalin, and Churchill.

THE CAT ACT

Having passed a bill to control the freedom of cats, the house at Springfield was not too exhausted by its deliberations to vote itself a $500 pay raise and pensions. Virtue does not go unrecognized at Springfield. The legislators weave their own laurel garlands and crown themselves.

The solemn exertions to regulate cats are worthy of the rest of the legislative record during the present session. The bill makes it unlawful for a cat to run at large unless "under the immediate and actual control of its owner." Any cat unaccompanied by parent or guardian can be thrust into a cat pound. Anybody seeing a cat ogling a bird's nest may capture the cat and hold him until an officer of the law comes panting to the scene.

We trust that a few cats aren't going to take this lying down. They can scatch, even tho they can't sit in the legislature. They can make the argument that this is discriminatory legislation. It is aimed at the proletariat of the cat world. Cats costing $35 and upward, according to the principal proponent of the bill, do not roam at large. They never join the boys on the back fence for a bit of gossip. They are house cats, too coddled and unenterprising to catch a mouse, let alone a rat.

We suppose the next step will be to recruit a cat control corps to go about enforcing the law. These worthies had better eat plenty of raw carrots to sharpen their night vision. Perhaps, on the whole, it would be just to require the legislators to assume the duties of enforcement. From the slow motion base stealing and asthmatic breathing that distinguished the recent ball game between the house and senate most of them could use the exercise.

For that matter, we doubt that the bill would ever be more than a dead letter, even if the senate were to display a similar inclination to idiocy by concurring in passage. As Aesop inquired, "Who is to bell the cat? It is easy to propose impossible remedies." A saner piece of legislation might be to bell members of the Illinois legislature, or prohibit them from being abroad when off the leash. At that, they seem to be well under leash as things are. But the bells wouldn't hurt. Maybe they could wear them in their hats.

MORE BABIES

From the London New Statesman, which learned it from the London Sunday Observer which learned it from the report of the Bank for International Settlements, we learn that contrary to expectations, the birth rate has been rising in the western world during this war. The experts in these matters knew that in the last war the birth rate fell sharply. They thought the same thing was going to happen again. Instead the rate has risen considerably, "in some cases even to a startling extent."

The increase seems to have taken place clear across the board. Neutrals like Eire, Switzerland, and Swedeh report the phenomenon. So do occupied countries like France, Holland, Denmark, and Bohemia. Australia, the United States, and Great Britain, all active belligerents, also have higher birth rates.

One theory is that because of the war, many young people married sooner than they otherwise would have done, but that would hardly be true in neutral countries, and in belligerent countries this influence should have been as strongly felt in the last war as in this one. Another guess is that the virtual disappearance of unemployment is responsible, but that happened in the last war, too, without any such result. Still another guess is that various governmental schemes for social security have invited larger families but, as the editor of the New Statesman says, a greater confidence in the future could hardly have been felt in Holland and Bohemia.

The suggestion that the presence of some millions of virile young Americans in Europe is the cause of it all will not stand examination. The increase in Great Britain, where this influence should have been most manifest was from 15.5 per 1,000 in 1938 to 16.9 in 1943. In Sweden, where no Americans were stationed, the rate rose from 14.9 to 19.3.

The New Statesman says "it does begin to look as if the countries of the west are at a turning point which will render inapplicable most of the forecasts of population movements made in recent years." Among these forecasts is one we saw the other day which predicts that in 1970 there will be in the United States a total of 21,600,000 males of military age [between 15 and 35], an increase of only 1,500,000 over 1940. The figure for Russia in 1970 is given as 43,300,000, an increase over 1940 of no less than 13,200,000. Britain and France were expected to lose more young men by 1970 than the United States gained.

Maybe it won't work out that way. Somebody pointed out recently that the population of Russia has maintained a fairly constant relationship with the rest of Europe over as long a period as reliable statistics are available. Perhaps that will remain true in the future, too.

BLOATED BUROCRACY

Government statistics are usually a couple of months behind time, especially, it seems, when they concern the number of burocrats on federal pay rolls. It may be July or August before we are able to find out whether the New Deal has done any of the economizing that it should have begun doing with the defeat of Germany. The unwillingness to trim back expenditures in other fields suggests, however, that the necessary task of pruning the pay rolls will be approached only with the greatest reluctance.

Sen. Byrd's last report for the joint committee on reduction of nonessential federal expenditures covered the month of March. The burocracy at the end of that month stood at 3,443,192 persons, which was 28,466 under the record high of the preceding month but still 71,000 more than at the end of January. The decline from February was somewhat more apparent than real, for 13,141 payrollers drawing salaries while on terminal leave were not figured into the computation.

Of the grand total drawing federal pay, no less than 548,542 persons were stationed outside the continental limits of the United States. The war department employed 429,173 of these. No explanation is offered for maintaining a civilian army of this extent in foreign lands. Inasmuch as service personnel usually constructs installations that are needed, and the war in Europe was in its concluding stages at the time the figures were reported, there is more than a suggestion that the WPA colonels are carrying on the program abroad.

Even less defensible is the fact that other departments and agencies had 119,369 employes abroad. The inference is that there is practically as much New Deal boondoggling going on in London, Paris, Cairo, Iceland, Delhi, and Chungking as there is in the major cities of this country. It is high time to start shutting up shop in these New Deal overseas hideouts.

The budget bureau recently recommended to the house civil service committee that reductions in the burocracy proceed at the rate of 20,000 a month for the next year. With only a one front war left to fight, and 11 million men in uniform assigned to the job, the proposed reduction is far short of what it should be. Instead of looking toward a cut of a quarter of a million payrollers, the administration should start thinking of giving the hard pressed taxpayer a little relief by lopping off a couple of million. When the pay rolls are reduced the nonessential activities of the agencies and bureaus will have to follow suit. The major saving would result right there.

CENSORSHIP EXERCISED BY INJUNCTION

Judge Graber in the Superior court has issued a temporary injunction restraining the CIO's Department Store Employes' union from publishing untruths about Montgomery Ward & Co. in the union's bulletin. The judge said that tho courts may not enjoin libel, they may enjoin conspiracies and that is all he was doing.

We emphatically disagree with the judge. In the case of Near vs. Minnesota which this newspaper carried to the United States Supreme court on behalf of a little sheet in Minneapolis, the issues presented to Judge Graber were adjudicated. The Supreme court forbade censorship by injunction as in violation of the Constitution. If they haven't done so lately, Judge Graber and the company's lawyer will profit from reading the opinion in that case.

If there is any authority for Judge Graber's finding, it lies in the recent opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the government's right to seize the Ward properties. The Near case interpreted the 14th amendment as a protection of fundamental civil rights. Judge Graber followed Judge Evans in seeking to repeal the amendment.

It is interesting that the British foreign office has on file a set of Herr Hitler's finger prints, probably picked off some small country's throat.—Detroit News.

MR. PEPYS ON STRIKE

16th June—Ran into the apple butter trick this week, and am not amused. Instead of the customary but infrequent pat of butter or oleo, a dish of this sweet smear was placed beside my plate of rolls, and I'd like to speak a few plain words to the inventor of the gag. I regard this fruity goo as edible in its proper place, but refuse to accept it as butter merely because of its name. When it is shoved at me, with pious expressions on the faces of waiters and stewards, I shall glare at the dish in contempt and let it stand neglected and ashamed. Then I shall chew my bread raw, with emphatic gnashings.

Think I shall experiment with olive oil, lightly salted, as lubrication for the fossilized buns that are now passing as the staff of life. Shall pretend I want more olive oil for my salad, and when in possession of the cruet will test its merits as a substitute for butter. It will not be true olive oil, of course, but a reasonable facsimile thereof, so this will be a double play in substitutes.

Read all the advs. for summer resorts in THE TRIB last Sunday, and then went out and took an unnecessary street car ride—the longest in town, maybe in the world. The scenery on Western av. from Howard st. to Beverly Hills is remarkable.

PHILATELIST'S RETURN

The precious albums that he loved so much
In leisure moments of another age,
Safe in a flameproof chest, await his touch
To mount new specimens on each blank page.
Matters of urgency at Anzio,
Liege, and Casablanca, and between
Have occupied his time three years or so;
But now his battle stars earn change of scene,
Some evening, soon, his study lamp shall shine
A bit too late, as new significance
Invests his gems, and from an odd design
He may look up and tell some circumstance,
Almost forgotten since, while in some camp
Inside the land that issued that rare stamp!

"Carriage Canopy at Rear"

The plain, hand-lettered sign, "Closed," at the doors of the Saratoga hotel spells finis to some of my teen-age glimpses of Chicago's theatrical history. Knowing that this hotel catered to "the profession," I haunted its portals to get a glimpse of its celebrated guests. I never entered the lobby and never visited its famous restaurant; it was too rich for my blood, as we used to say. But I still hold one of its advertisments of that period, clipped from a theater program, which proclaims the glories of its Oriental dining room.

To me, this advertisment is an epitome of the spirit of the so-called gay '90s. There is a touch of romanticism in the phrasing of the invitation to dine in one of the "16 supper room boxes, opera box style." Then the significant footnote: "Canopied carriage entrance in the rear end of the building."

This bit of printing brings back visions of gallant stage door johnnies and gay comic opera girls, dining and wining to the strains of a fine string orchestra—and flitting away in the tactful carriage that waited by the discreet canopy in the rear. . . . Ah! Vale, Saratoga.

SMALL TOWN GOLF

Buck, the bull snake, slithers around
Our small town course, where the gophers abound.
He's a five-foot beauty, thick in the middle
From a gopher diet, but fit as a fiddle.
A golf course, to gophers, simply means
A place for digging, especially greens.
And so old Buck rates our respect—
There's a clubhouse notice to that effect.
He seems to know it, ignores us as loafers,
And goes on his way, prospecting for gophers.
Locker room stories of Buck are many—
Believe them all or don't believe any.
Doc Smith claims his putt just hung on the lip—
Old Buck eased up and gave it a tip.
I once messed a shot, the Scotch term it "scaff"—
Have you seen (I did) a bull snake laugh?
Lord, don't let him laugh at a hot-tempered guy
Who might tee off on old Buck's right eye.
Buck, golfers, and gophers, amusing indeed—
To the golfers? Well hardly; that I concede.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

P. J. asks: "If a veteran is receiving training because of vocational handicap will his pension be increased in the event he marries or will it remain at the same figure granted when he first applied for the training?"

Monthly compensation is adjusted according to the status of the veteran. If a veteran drawing compensation as a single person marries, he then may make application for the compensation for a married man. Likewise, if drawing pension as a married man and a child is born, or adopted, the veteran may obtain the additional compensation. The date of increase will be the date of receipt of the claim by the veterans' administration or the date his supporting evidence shows he is entitled to the claim, whichever is later.

G. H. asks: Can my fiance, serving overseas, make an allotment from his pay in my favor? We plan a joint account against building a home when he is discharged."

Yes. Any person in the military service may make a voluntary allotment from his pay to any individual or agency he designates. In your case the allotment may be made in your name or it may be made directly to the bank for deposit in your account.

Mrs. E. D. asks: "Are members of the merchant marine required to make allotments in favor of dependent wives and children the same as men in the army and navy?"

No. Merchant marines' allotments are voluntary.

CHICKEN POX FAVORS CITY CHILDREN

CHICKEN POX has nothing to do with poultry. In 1690 Morton likened the lesions to a chick-pea. Physicians refer to the disease as "varicella," a term introduced by Vogel in 1764.

Infants seem to have a natural immunity to the disorder for the first six months of life. City dwellers are favored and many of our country friends escape during their early years only to fall victims later in life on visiting or moving to an urban area. Occasionally epidemics are encountered.

A virus is the offending agent and it is akin to the type which causes shingles. In fact, chicken pox and herpes may occur in two members of the household at the same time. Undoubtedly they are different strains of one disease.

The malady is less contagious than smallpox and measles but—on contact—few youngsters escape who have not had it previously. The virus is present in the skin eruptions and in the mucous membranes lining the mouth, nose, and throat. In all probability it is spread thru droplets in the air just before the rash appears and during the six ensuing days.

Approximately two weeks after exposure, symptoms may be expected. Two or three days before the typical eruption is exhibited the youngster may feel ill, with fever, headache, and vague pains. Discomfort is usually mild but can be annoying. When an adult is afflicted the condition may be more serious.

I recall an instance when I was asked to see a school teacher who apparently had a simple respiratory infection. I could find no reason for the rise in temperature. This repeated itself on the second day. By the third, the family was concerned and suggested a consultation. When I walked into the room with my colleague, to my great embarrassment, the characteristic outbreak had developed and the diagnosis was obvious.

The skin manifestation starts as a small pinhead-size, pinkish-red pimple. Within a few hours this changes to a blemish resembling a tiny blister on a red base. Occasionally the color is not prominent and the vesicle looks like a drop of water. When this ruptures, a crust forms. In contrast to smallpox, all stages may exist at one time—pimples, vesicles, and scabs. By the end of a week no new lesions are noted but three weeks may pass before the scales finally drop off. Slight scarring may result, particularly if scratching has invited infection.

Because most cases recover it is unnecessary to protect potential candidates. Board of health rules vary. In certain communities placards are nailed upon the door. Older children and adults who have had the ailment are allowed to go about their business. There is still some argument as to whether or not the disease is contagious after crust formation. Many authorities believe that it can be disseminated so long as they have not fallen off.

Itching may be relieved by calamine lotion. To aid in discouraging scratching, the fingernails should be kept short. If the child is too young to coöperate, gloves or splints may be used on the hands. In sponging the body, care should be taken not to remove the crusts.

BREAST PREFERRED

K. R. writes: Is it harmful to put a new baby on the bottle? My wife is having a child and for personal reasons does not want to nurse it.

REPLY

Most pediatricians recommend the breast because it is the natural and ideal method. Digestive upsets are less likely to occur and the milk is relatively free of germs. Artificial feeding is the second choice. The formula must be prepared under sanitary conditions to prevent contamination.

BLINKER

Mrs. A. writes: My 9 year old girl started blinking her eyes real hard. I took her to a specialist and he prescribed glasses. She has been wearing them some months, but the habit persists. We are a nervous family and I have been wondering if this could be responsible.

REPLY

Yes, as jittery people often exhibit tics.

A COMMON DEFECT

L. J. writes: Do married women have varicose veins more frequently than those who remain single?

REPLY

Altho weakness of the vein wall is an inherited tendency, strain of some sort is the immediate cause. The pressure accompanying pregnancy is responsible in many cases.

The Secret Weapon?

[Letter written by a Chicago boy in Germany a week after V-E day].

"I've been wondering what it was like at home when word came that the war in Europe was won. To us here it was business as usual, the fighting had ceased a few days before in our sector, and the disintegration of the enemy seemed so rapid and certain that the setting of the final date and the formal announcements seemed merely a matter of form. But to the men killed or wounded while the surrender terms were being made, it must have been a very real and tragic thing to spill one's blood with peace just a few hours away.

"To show you my state of mind that evening, I was working late in the office at Salach when all hell breaks loose in the street outside. I could hear burp guns, BAR's, rifles, pistols, machine guns, and see flares going up outside my window. I had my lights flipped out, was flat on the floor, and was frantically trying to reach my own weapon in the dark before I realized this wasn't an attack or a raid, but was the minute 0001 when the firing ceased, and all the rear echelon cowboys and line companies in the same town were making sure they could say they had fired their last shot on that same minute.

"It had the Fourth of July beat a mile for noise and pyrotechnics. There were signal and parachute flares and AA tracer bullets crisscrossing the sky, and you could hear the rounds zinging off the buildings where somebody hadn't been too choosy about shooting straight up in the air. With all the lead flying, I ducked inside, determined not to be a casualty when chances for a Purple Heart were slim. I honestly didn't think that the cooks and clerks carried that much ammunition with them.

"Since that night there have been many changes in our daily routine. I can't get used to the brightly lighted windows and the sight of every one in garrison [overseas] caps instead of the familiar steel. Now, instead of greeting another GI with 'Hi-ya, bud?' it's 'How many points ya got, Mac?' Everyone is speculating on our fate: CBI or occupation. We also can now write where we are. I feel like Secret Agent K-3 giving away all those geographical locations, but the high priced help at SHAEF says it's OK.

"Bavaria is so beautiful and peaceful one almost forgets that these same people who are now romping in the sun were killing and maiming us a few weeks ago. At times I wonder just who succeeded in killing whom. More men of military age, in picturesque leather shorts and Tyrol hats, appear on the streets every day. And, since this town was untouched, the people from all outward appearance never heard of Hitler, concentration camps, Jew-baiting, or goose stepping. Sure, these men were probably German soldiers, but the PW camps are bulging and who will feed these even if any one would take the responsibility for arresting them without being sure of getting them off his hands?

"So the GI's are already beginning to forget that they came as conquerors and are starting to think of themselves as tourists. I hope our too friendly invasion isn't preparing the grounds for another war.

"It is spring, and you can't blame the boy who has been fighting all winter when he whistles at some perfectly built fraulein—and they're all that way—and the line companies have been pretty lax about enforcing the nonfraternization policy. As a consequence, some of the boys have done more than just whistle. I hope this policy doesn't turn out to be like prohibition, for it was built on a sound idea, that of impressing the Germans just what life would be under a stern military occupation. But we failed to consider that funny, easy going friendliness of the average American, and sometimes I wonder if the civil population isn't smirking a bit at the confusion of the Americans trying their darndest to be tough while slipping a kid a bonbon when no one is looking. Personally I think the spring weather, this picture postcard country, and the people might turn out to be the new German secret weapon."

TREATMENT IN ARMY HOSPITALS

Camp Atterbury, Ind., June 7—In today's TRIBUNE I was interested in the article about 63 army hospitals which give specialized aid. Maybe some of your staff would be interested in the other side of the story from a patient's view.

We get good treatment, good food, and generally fine conditions, except for slow and inefficient action because of ham-strung administrative procedures. Many of us may wait one or two months for a discharge after all treatment is completed and we hear so much of the need for additional bed space. It is against the hospital system to give furloughs after a patient has been operated on, for he is supposedly waiting for discharge or reassignment after completing treatment.

I question ward officers, their secretaries, and hospital personnel as why things take so long and the only reply I can get is that patients must go thru the routine administrative procedure and there is no use to try to buck the system. For three months we have been led to believe the mess was to be cleared up, but there are some that have been in here lohger than I have.

We find frequent cases of men waiting many months for an operation, but in a way that can't be helped, for our surgeons are really pushed. But there is no reason for a man laying around for months just waiting for his discharge. The army has had two sets of visiting generals since I entered here in February, but they only see what the hospital shows them, not the forgotten cases. SOLDIER

NO INVITATION TO IDLENESS

Chicago, June 4—Your editorial comments on President Truman's recommendation regarding unemployment compensation of $25 a week for 26 weeks would encourage idleness. I do not think our President intends to make unemployment attractive to a constantly growing shiftless element, but rather to encourage the young by providing plenty of work with high wages and sound profits by lowering the retirement age under social security from 65 years to 55 years of age.

When a man reaches the age of 50 it is very difficult for him to convince employers that he is young enough to have the vitality to fulfill his conditions of employment. This, of course, is not true today with man power shortage, but it is rapidly approaching. No man ever likes to be idle unless he is a professional loafer or handicapped with illness. The man or woman who has reached this age is certainly entitled to his remuneration. They have paid their premiums faithfully and cannot be classified as shiftless elements.

This $25 a week payment is not such a large inducement to invite idlers, after food, clothing, and shelter have been deducted. In fact, it is not enough. R. J. WIDHOLM

ONE IN A MILLION

Oak Park, Ill., June 9—To THE TRIBUNE and all the members of its able staff, congratulations! It was a very thrilling piece of news in our TRIBUNE this morning to find that circulation was again in excess of one million daily.

DISCHARGES FOR CONCHIES

BROHL, Germany, May 29—From an article recently published in the Stars and Stripes I understand some conscientious objectors are eligible for release in the near future. This certainly should make some of us fellows who have seen almost a year of combat in the E. T. O. proud of our government and country.

None of them has done anything to bring about victory, so why should any of them be eligible for release? After being overseas for 14 months, almost 11 of them in combat with the 1st army, I am still being considered for duty in the South Pacific.

Why any of them should be turned free before a combat soldier is something that puzzles me. Another thing I cannot understand is why they are given three points for a wife while we are given none.

SPEAKING OF THE UNDER-PRIVILEGED

Chicago, June 8—Congressmen may be badly underpaid, yet the average man, and particularly the white collar worker, is denied more than a bare existence under the present high cost of living. A. W. L.

Chicago, June 8—I have just heard the news that President Truman has proposed an increase in pay for congressmen from $10,000 to $15,000 or $25,000 per year. If a congressman cannot live on $10,000, how is a service man's wife and child to make ends meet on $960 a year, or about $18 a week?

Working doesn't increase our income because we have to pay some one to take care of our baby and there are other expenses involved in holding a job. My baby was ill two months this winter and she needed my constant care and still does. My husband has been in service two years and if it weren't for a savings account that we had, by now my baby and I would have been without a rag to wear. You cannot pay for food, rent, gas, medicine, etc., on our income and still buy clothes. Now every cent we had is gone and we just exist. COMPLETELY DISGUSTED

HOW ABOUT THE STREETS?

Chicago, June 9—Mayor Kelly talks about clean alleys. Why not clean streets, too? Central av. in Austin's 37th ward has not been cleaned for two years and the sewers also need it. The gravel that has been thrown on the street for the last two winters by the bus lines is still lying there.

JOINT TENANCY

Tinley Park, Ill., June 12—My wife and I have all of our property in joint tenancy. 1. Would my children inherit my share if I made a will to this effect? 2. Would my wife become sole owner upon my death regardless of the will?

H. A.

1. No. If the deed expressly provides for "joint tenancy" as distinguished from "tenancy in common," then on death of one of the tenants the real estate will go to the survivor without necessity for probate and to the exclusion of the heirs or devisees of the one who dies first.

2. Yes. This is assuming that she is the survivor. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT

CATHOLIC PAPER URGES DELAY ON DRAFT IN PEACE

Many Other Groups Back This Viewpoint

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS

The Rev. Edward V. Dailey's lead editorial in the current issue of the official journal of the Roman Catholic archdiocese, The New World, urges the country to "wait for the sober hour of peace" before deciding on military training in peace time. The editorial reflects the action taken recently by the Catholic hierarchy of the county. This viewpoint is supported by nearly all major religious denominations, as well as by education and labor.

The various churches and organizations express one or both of two views on peace time conscription. One, represented by the hierarchy and a large number of other groups, is to postpone the decision until we see what the peace will be like and "until the boys come home to aid in the decision." This, obviously, is not a pacifist point of view, because it does not express opposition to the draft as a matter of principle.

Opposed in Principle

The other view, exemplified by the Church of the Brethren, historically a pacifist church, is officially opposed to the peace time draft in principle. Joining with the Brethren are official actions taken by American Methodism, Presbyterians, Congregational-Christian churches, the United Council of Church Women, the Y. W. C. A., the W. C. T. U., the Parent-Teachers congress, the committee on world peace of the Southern Baptist convention, the Northern Baptist convention, the Catholic Mothers and Daughters of America, the National Catholic Women's union, United Christian Youth movement, the National conference of Methodist Youth Fellowship, the post-war commission of the Catholic association for international peace, and many others.

The postponement position predominates in educational circles. In addition to the Catholic hierarchy, this view has been officially expressed by the United Lutheran Church of America, the International convention of Disciples of Christ [Christian churches], the Fraternal Council of Negro churches, the National Education association, the Association of American Colleges, the Association of Land Grant Colleges, the American Association of School Administrators, the National Commission on Christian Higher Education, the General Synod of Evangelical and Reformed Churches, the American Federation of Teachers, and many others.

Condemn Secret Sessions

Mrs. Alexander Stewart, executive secretary of a Chicago committee opposing the peace time draft, has expressed opposition to the manner in which the congressional committee has conducted hearings on the draft. Dr. Harold Ruopp of the Central church and president of the Chicago Church federation, and Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein of K. A. M. temple are co-chairmen of the Chicago committee. A statement of the committee has been forwarded to Rep. Woodrum [D., Va.], chairman of the congressional committee, in the names of the Chicago group's 50 sponsors and the "thousands who are joining the movement."

The committee condemns "secret sessions" of army and navy officials with heads of civic and religious groups as being "undemocratic."

Religious News Notes

Sixty years ago representatives of 46 Mission Covenant churches of the country met in Chicago and formed the denomination known officially as the Evangelical Mission Covenant Church of America to bring the gospel to Swedish immigrants coming to the United States in great numbers. The denomination has grown to include 460 churches on the continent and will signalize its anniversary at its annual convention in North Park church, Berwyn and Christiana avs., beginning Wednesday. A $500,000 fund has been raised to celebrate the event. Thirteen new churches will come up for membership. Prof. Elmer W. Fondell of North Park college will be moderator. . . . The Mission Covenant's constituency now covers all national origins.

Another meeting opening Wednesday which is of interest in northern Illinois will be the 106th annual Rock River Methodist conference in Chicago temple. Bishop J. Ralph Magee, resident head of the Chicago Methodist area covering all Illinois, will preside at the sessions. Dr. Charles R. Goff is host to the conference, and the Rev. Dr. John M. Schneider of North Austin Methodist church will deliver the memorial address at the 11 a. m. session. . . . The Lutheran hour guest preacher tomorrow on the Mutual Broadcasting system will be the Rev. Erwin Kurth, Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Rt. Rev. Wallace E. Conkling, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, and President Clark G. Kuebler of Ripon [Wis.] college will be the speakers at a dinner meeting Monday night opening a four day conference of student chaplains at Seabury-Western Theological seminary, Evanston. Church problems in the post-war academic world will be discussed by the Rev. Bernard Iddings Bell, Providence, R. I., who will head the forum on "The Church and Industry"; Dr. John U. Nef, University of Chicago; the Rev. John Heuss, chairman of the commission on college work for the fifth Episcopal province; Dean Wilber Katz of the University of Chicago's law school, and the Very Rev. Alden Drew Kelley, president of the seminary.

Central church will hold the last service of the season tomorrow morning in the Studebaker theater. Dr. Harold W. Ruopp will conclude his series of sermons repreached by request on the topic, "The Power Within You." . . . Tuesday will be the Salvation Army's annual "Doughnut day." Lt. Commissioner John J. Allan said the 1945 goal is $100,000 to aid the needy encountered in the Salvation Army's welfare work. Last year $73,000 was collected by about 6,000 volunteers. To date only 4,500 have enlisted, so more workers are needed. Anybody wishing to assist should communicate with Mrs. Helen Bolsum, 327 S. La Salle st., or telephone Harrison 5790.

Dr. Alexander M. Dushkin of New York will give the commencement address at the 20th anniversary exercises of the College of Jewish Studies tomorrow night in Thorne hall, Chicago campus, Northwestern university. Dr. Louis Gottschalk, president of the board of Jewish education, will deliver the address of welcome, and Dr. Felix A. Levy, Congregation Emanuel, will award the diplomas.

The Very Rev. Edward L. Hughes, O. P., will celebrate the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood with a thanksgiving mass at 10 a. m. tomorrow in St. Pius church, 1900 S. Ashland av. Father Hughes was appointed director of the Dominican Shrine of St. Jude Thaddeus in 1941. Three years later, when St. Pius was made a priory, he became its first prior.

She has admitted drowning her two babies, Nancy, 3, and Constance, 7 months, in the bath tub of their home at 2429 S. Troy st.

Mrs. Souhrada made no request to attend the funeral, but relatives of both parents attended. A crowd of nearly 1,000 persons gathered around the chapel at 834 N. Ashland av. and followed the hearse to St. Ludmilla's church.

John Souhrada, 40, the father, died while Constance was being born.

OBITUARIES

Mrs. Clara Belle Meeker Stearns

Services for Mrs. Clara Belle Meeker Stearns, former Chicago clubwoman, who died in Coral Gables, Fla., will be held in Rosehill cemetery chapel at 2:30 p. m. Monday. Lt. Comdr. Cragg to Return to U. S. with Eisenhower Party

BY JUDITH CASS

ALMOST as excited as the bride herself when Miss Caroline Ericson and Albert Stoneman Long Jr. are married at 4 p. m. today in the Presbyterian church of Libertyville will be Miss Ericson's youthful aunt, Mrs. Richard T. Cragg, who will leave immediately after the ceremony for Washington, D. C., to welcome Lt. Comdr. Cragg back from overseas.

A telegram from the war department informed Mrs. Cragg that her husband, who has served as flag secretary and aide to Vice Adm. Alan G. Kirk, would arrive from Europe with Gen. Eisenhower and his party. Mrs. Cragg will go to New York for the celebration planned there for Tuesday to welcome the party. She and Comdr. Cragg expect to be back in Evanston the first of July.

In today's wedding Miss Ericson, daughter of Mrs. Melvin B. Ericson of Libertyville, will be given in marriage by her grandfather, Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, former Vice President of the United States. Miss Jean Exton of Washington, D. C., will serve as maid of honor, and Mr. Long's sister, Mrs. Hugh A. On the Calendar

When the Saddle and Cycle club completed arrangements for another in a series of informal Saturday night dinners tonight with a well known Negro boogie-woogie artist at the piano, the entertainment committee didn't know that it would have competition from a navy show which will be put on at the Foster beach within easy view from the club terrace. Saddle members will be able to enjoy the show tomorrow night, also. Among those who are entertaining at tonight's party are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson II., whose wedding anniversary celebration will be made doubly gay by the rockets and other paraphernalia of the navy exhibition. They are giving a small

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

Origin of the White Collar

Way back in eighteen twenty-five
In Troy, N. Y., they did contrive
To set a style to sorely vex
The poor and plodding manly sex.

And from that day have collars irked
The souls [and necks] of men who worked,
Until, tho father scarce could bear 'em,
Daughter now aspires to wear 'em!

SALLY

Seniority Blues

Isn't it all too easy to get the seniority blues? Isn't it possible to forget that seniority alone need not be the criterion in judging employes? I've worked in offices where woman employes have hung on for years, never learning new techniques, never caring to learn them, satisfied to go thru routine motions year in and year out—piling up their seniority rating, to be sure, but adding nothing fresh or valuable to the office procedure. I've seen these same women distressed because new employes were added or because new employes asked [and got] salaries the "old timers" considered unfair.

The "seniors" never stopped to consider that experience gained elsewhere by the new employes might be worth as much to the firm as the unvarying routine followed by the old time employes.

Ability should count, plus technical expertness, coöperation, and everything else that goes to make a valuable employe—new or old.

OBSER VANT

Disclosure

From February to May, I sat next to Nosey Parker II., in a class at Northwestern university evening school. I knew of her identity, but didn't think a person given to nosey parking would have much brains, so I neglected to look at her paper during the exam. Today I received my final mark and compared notes with Nosey. Hers was "A" and mine unmentionable. I asked her about the exam and she said it wasn't so tough if you had the instructor's lectures word for word in shorthand. [The instructor speaks 250 words per minute!]

So now a mere man capitulates to a feminine Nosey Parker!

Gifts Sought for Ice Fund; Need Is Great

Chicago finally has captured summer after a long discouraging game of hide and seek. Now the beach parties may begin, the sails race across the lake, and the ice tinkle in tall, cool, summer drinks.

In the sunny months, Chicago is pleasant for residents who have the leisure and legal tender to enjoy it. But it is miserable for the poor and the sickly to whom the heat means tainted and sour foods, tepid water, and spoiled medicines.

So today THE TRIBUNE once more opens its annual Ice Fund campaign.

The Ice Fund, thru the generosity of Tribune readers, supplies ice each week to needy families thru the United Charities. Last year readers contributed $1,224.80, which furnished ice all season for 110 families listed in eight United Charities offices. Many of the cases were referred to the charities by the Infant Welfare society, the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, and the Children's Memorial hospital.

The appeals for ice are once more flooding into the United Charities offices.

One comes from an elderly mother of a soldier reported missing in action. Sick from grief and advanced diabetes, she must balance her diet and keep her insulin cool. She is under heavy medical expense and is unable to provide even bare necessities for herself.

On the far west side, a family with 10 children desperately needs ice coupons. The mother, who is having difficulty in pregnancy and has been told by her doctor that she will bear twins, tries hard to make ends meet. Her husband's earnings are insufficient as he has incipient tuberculosis and is able to work only part time.

Another large family including four children under 6 years of age occupies a very damp, cheerless basement flat which has only three windows. Having recently undergone a major operation, the husband is able to work only part time. The wife is attending a clinic regularly for a cardiac condition. Dampness makes their food moldy. The United Charities recently purchased a second hand ice box to remedy this condition, but now the family needs ice to put in it.

There are many similar cases, all requiring the simple comfort ice can bring. Tribune readers can supply ice for one family for one week with only one dollar.

All contributions to the Ice Fund will be gratefully acknowledged in these columns. They should be sent in the name of the fund to the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., Tribune Tower.

Cooler Sleeping Attire Ready for Those Hot Nights

BY REA SEEGER

There is a short circuit to cool, comfortable summer sleeping! Shop for the trick new "sleepers" that are unquestionably the smartest successors to the old, heavier night clothing. Most of them are in two pieces. The bra tops are narrower than ever before. You may choose between sleeping shorts or the ankle length slacks, but the tops are virtually the same. Even the nightgowns have been sliced in two pieces, the skirt attached to a smooth fitted comfortable band belt, and the top a mere matter of a narrow bra.

You'll find bright gay prints in popular jersey, with most of the background colors either pastels or cool white, but the floral motifs are giddy, sometimes gaudy. The shorts and tie-on Ball bra tops are especially attractive in flowered jersey models. Solid color jersey models, which need no ironing, come in dainty pastels and Grecian all-whites, as well as in gay prints.

Cool, washable cottons cut in the same informal manner, shorts and brief bolero top or halter bras, are delectable affairs because of the color and the coquettish bow trim in contrasting color. For example, there's a pale yellow number with cherry red bows, a blue model with yellow bows, or a duet of skirt and bra top with lacings at the front of the top and the center of the belt of contrasting color. And if these deliberately divided twosomes don't click, try the many gowns with the midriff section completely cut out. They're almost as cool and comfortable as the two piecers and come in a grand assortment of pastel colors and prints.

U. S. Slipping to Hitlerism, Hutchins Says

If America and her allies continue to condemn the entire German and Japanese nations they will be guilty of adopting the nazi doctrine that certain nations or races are superior and fit to rule while others are fit only for extermination, Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, asserted yesterday.

Addressing 524 graduating students at the university's 221st convocation, President Hutchins pleaded that the judgment of war criminals be kept on an individual basis rather than spread over a whole nation.

"The conquest of the United States by Hitler is revealed by our adoption of the nazi doctrine that certain races or nations are superior and fit to rule, whereas others are vicious and fit only to be exterminated or enslaved," he said. "We are saying about the Germans and the Japanese what Hitler said about the Jews. And we are saying about ourselves—or at least strongly hinting it—what Hitler said about the blond Teutonic 'Aryans.'"

War criminals must be punished, Hutchins asserted, but Hitler's conquest of America will be increased if we succumb to the idea that social and political problems can be most effectively solved with the aid of a firing squad.

"Justice demands that none of the guilty war criminals escape," he said, "but at the same time it must be clear that the characteristic of criminals is that they are individuals, not nations or races. They should be punished for what they individually did."

Punishment for these acts must be meted out legally, he said, with a fair trial and adherence to the Anglo-Saxon principle that every man is presumed innocent until he is proved guilty. The standards of conduct to be imposed on the Germans, he added, must not be that of heroes and saints but that of the ordinary man, who thruout the world thinks first of the lives of his family and second about his principles.

Jane Leonard to Be Bride Today; Gay Reception Set

Rain or shine, the wedding reception at the junior Arthur G. Leonards' Stonebridge farms in Wilmington, Ill., following the 4:30 p. m. wedding today of their daughter, Jane, and Robert Wilson Goes, will be one of the most festive of the season. Refreshments will be served beneath a 30x70 foot outdoor marquee, which will serve as a protection for the guests in case of bad weather, and there will be dancing on the terrace.

The ceremony itself will be performed before a smaller circle of relatives and friends gathered in Wilmington's First Presbyterian church. The bride, whose wedding veil and gown will be trimmed in yards of heirloom rose pointe lace appliqued on net, will have Mrs. Paul Rider of Joliet as matron of honor and Mr. Goes' sister, Dorothy, as maid of honor. When Lt. George Chandler Webster received a short leave this week-end from his post at the army air field in San Marcos, Tex., he and his financée, Miss Suzanne Margaret Newman, hurriedly made plans to be married to 4:30 p. m. today in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ellsworth Newman of Highland Park. Only the immediate families will witness the ceremony, but a larger reception will follow.

Miss Nancy Newman will be maid of honor for her sister. Lt. Webster's sister, Chelsea, will serve as bridesmaid. Lt. Thru the Looking Glass

Nothing changes a woman so dramatically as a change in hairstyle, but very few of us have as much courage as we ought to have about adopting a completely new style.

Nine times out of ten when a hair stylist suggests something radically different from the hair arrangement a woman has been accustomed to she protests. She goes to the shop with the idea that she wants a change, but when it comes right to the point of putting hair up, for example, when she's always worn it down, or placing a forehead fringe where before there was none, she'll be afraid to make the change.

The eye has to get accustomed to what is new and different. This takes a few days, but the woman with the courage to be different is the one who achieves a reputation for smartness. She doesn't get so bored with herself, either, if she takes a little style flier now and then.

The new look in hair is smoothness. This is difficult to accustom your eye to if you've had waves and pin curls for the last ten years. But the women who try the new styles and stick with them for a week or so soon find that they're far more attractive than the old models. Sleek, shiny hair with hardly a ripple in it, dressed in lines that suit the individual, is smart. And it's not, as so many women fear, at all "old" looking. What's really aging is a dull, habitual style of wearing your hair. Changes are youth preserving.

Don't be afraid to do something different with your hair. It's fun, and the chances are that the new will be an improvement on the old. You'll look peculiar to yourself for a day or so, maybe, but you'll learn to love the style that's smart.

'Midsummer Nightmare'

By Christopher Hale

(Copyright: 1945: By Mrs. Frances Stephens)

INSTALMENT XLVIII.
PLANNED REVENGE

"Have you any further news from Dirk?" Miss Warburton asked Lt. French. "O, yes," he said. "Adams came round for a few lucid moments at the hospital. Says he wasn't planning to hurt you, just give you a bad scare. He swears it wasn't you who hit him. Not that we need that evidence."

"But why did Gerrit knock out Dirk?"

"Several reasons. Gerrit wanted to talk to you, alone quickly, and Dirk was in the way. Also, if he could finish Dirk and pin it on you, he might be able to make the other crimes stick to you, too. It was one of the few impulsive actions he made. In fact he darned near got away with it."

"So you're not going to contend that you knew all along it was Gerrit?" North said.

"I'd like to kid myself I could get away with that, senator. But confidentially, I was dumber than usual. I didn't connect Gerrit with Mrs. Paradine's death at all. He had opportunity but no motive whatever. He only profited $5,000 by her death and knew she was only willing him that much. And, as the murderer had doubtless paid $5,000 to Tillie . . . that would have canceled the money motive. So it seemed he had no reason to kill her."

"I still don't see any reason," Miss Warburton said.

North eagerly took the floor.

"But it's obvious now, my dear. Mrs. Paradine, would have been able to tell her brothers apart, after the fire. Her death came first. The reason for it didn't even exist until afterwards. I see now Gerrit must have planned the whole elaborate, devilish thing. Diabolical. His own family!"

"Then he wrote the note to me, telling me to hunt a new job?" Miss Warburton asked.

"Yes. He wanted to get rid of any one who might happen to guess his identity in one of the moments when he forgot himself. Just as you did, Miss Warburton. I've no doubt he had a substitute note all ready and went into Sybrand's office to wait for you to come to them and resign. When you said you weren't resigning he couldn't urge you to, of course."

"And," North added, "He substituted that blank piece of paper to discredit you with Lt. French when you showed it to him. Gerrit couldn't know you'd been smart enough to show it to me, too!"

Miss Warburton smiled at this interpretation of her actions.

"Just when, French, did you become sure Gerrit was your man?" North asked.

"After the fire. When we found the body."

Miss Warburton said, "But I should think that would have made you think Gerrit was dead. It did me."

"Did you see the body?"

"Alas, yes."

"But just for a second. You didn't examine it the way we did. The way it was burned was a miracle. You never saw such an intelligent, coöperative fire. The legs were consumed and one arm, but not the hand that had that identifying ring on it, tho the tips of all the fingers were charred. Fingerprints, see?

"Only enough of the head was left to show the top of the bandage. And the bit of wound under it was freshly cut. The inference was that the rest of the scar had burned up and that the end had split open. But as I got it, that face had been prepared for us to identify as Gerrit. Particularly, as the body had been placed so no further burning could destroy its prepared evidence. It was all too neat."

French stood up. His assistant was waiting near the door. "I'll be seeing you two again. I'll be glad of any help you can give me, senator, to see Gerrit gets everything coming to him."

"A pleasure!" said the senator vehemently. "I'll be in town for some time. . . . I think." He glanced at Miss Warburton.

Sen. North gazed at Miss Warburton in silence.

"Put that stuff down, Olivia."

She finished a row of purling.

"I was proud of you this afternoon, my dear, when you saw us in the doorway and didn't give it away. I saw French give you the signal to keep stalling that beast along for a few seconds, and you did a magnificent job."

"Mere self-preservation."

"You may look at it any way you choose. But I'll never forget what I went thru in those terrible minutes. Then I realized I had a gun in my hand . . . and I used it . . . at once."

She only smiled affectionately.

"But," North said impatiently, "Let's not waste time with the past. When are you going to marry me?"

"I've told you all along. . . ."

"You know how I feel about you." He sat down and took her right hand in his. "And . . . look at me . . . Olivia. . . ."

She thought, I'll be as kind and decent as I can. She raised her eyes and looked steadily into his. The words ebbed away. She couldn't remember them, or anything else.

"You do love me, don't you, Olivia?" he whispered.

She could feel everything getting out of control. She knew from the exultant smile on his lips that she was giving herself away extravagantly, forever. But the least she could do now was explain.

"Wait . . . wait . . . please. There's something . . . I didn't want to have to tell you this, or any one. I've never told another person in the world."

The shaken soberness of her voice held him.

She began awkwardly and hesitantly to tell him the story of Leif. She told only the necessary facts, none of her reactions. It was just as well. She saw Leif for what he was. And it was not a pleasant memory.

The senator listened. His tanned, belligerent face flushed, but he did not release her hand. The only change in the steady affection of his gaze was to soften and deepen it.

"So now," she finished. "Now you know why I can't marry you."

His hand tightened on hers.

"Well no, I don't. All you need now, my dear, is a divorce."

Her voice sharpened. "Then I haven't made it clear to you at all. I tell you, I don't even know for certain that I was married. He may have done right by our Nell, but I haven't a blessed thing to prove it. No marriage lines to carry in my bosom."

"What of it?" he was unimpressed.

"But I am telling you what of it! You aren't listening. Can't you imagine what a mess the Japanese have made of Bangkok? There's not even a chance of getting a copy of the record from there, if there is a record and I doubt it. The vital statistics are probably blown to the four winds." She was thoroly exasperated.

Children Often Admire Their Grandparents

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"I was one of many children," said a psychiatrist the other day, "and we were an average, happy family. But my visits to my grandparents are among my happiest memories.

"My grandmother never asked more than two of us at a time, and I believe now she had a purpose in doing so. I know I enjoyed not being one of a crowd.

"Gram would always have all the things we liked best to eat. Granddad would let us trail him all over the place. Gram always seemed to have time for us 'young squirts,' too. She'd listen, look, or talk right on the spur of the moment. Mother was too busy for that, I suppose, because I remember how eagerly we used to go to Gram with everything. Mother said Gram spoiled us. Perhaps that was true, but I'm glad she did."

Of course there's spoiling and spoiling. But I'd much rather have my children "spoiled" by their grandparents in this warm, indulgent, cherishing way than treated sternly or even in a coolly efficient manner.

Naturally I don't mean a silly spoiling, or over indulgence in foods and sweets, and the sprouting of bad manners, disobedience, and self-consciousness. But a warm "spoiling" like that described by the man I quoted at the beginning of this column; that could not hurt any child.

Naturally, the grandmother who sees the children only on a visit and the one who lives with them all the time are in slightly different categories. Even so, I think grandmother and grandfather can and should stand for something rather special and different with the children.

Yes, corn sirup may be used to stretch sugar in jams and jellies, but results won't be as perfect as they were in the days when we could use sugar without restraint.

If too much corn sirup is used, the jelly may not jell. There's also a greater possibility of fermentation in the finished jam or jelly, in case the seal is inadequate, for the extra moisture encourages it. It's best to use regular canning seals on jams, conserves, marmalades and preserves in which corn sirup has been used. This means they must be sealed at once, very hot. Or they may be processed for 15 minutes in the boiling water bath. Jellies shouldn't be processed.

Corn sirup is not as sweet as sugar, therefore jams, jellies, and other sweets made with it will be less rich than usual.

Only the pure white corn sirup is usable for this purpose. Some very light, mild flavored honeys may be used in the same way [they're as sweet as sugar], but honey may affect the color of the preserve, and usually gives it a distinct honey flavor.

How to Use Sirup in Jellies and Jams Without Pectin

Do not substitute for more than a third of the sugar in a jelly. Replace the sugar with an equal amount of light corn sirup or honey. The jelly will require longer cooking than usual to evaporate the excess moisture. Use a wide cooking pan, and work with a small quantity.

In jams, conserves, preserves, and marmalades, sirup can replace half the sugar at most, but better results are obtainable if not more than a third of the sugar is replaced with sirup. Seal with regular canning seals, while the product is hot. It is well also to process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes, as a precaution against fermentation.

How to Use Sirup in Jellies and with Liquid or Powdered Pectin

In any recipe using liquid pectin, 2 cups of sugar may be replaced with 2 cups of light corn sirup.

Up to half the measure of sugar in a recipe requiring powdered pectin may be sirup.

An extra glass of jelly or jam will result from the use of the sirup.

Jams, jellies, and preserves always must be made carefully, but unusual care is needed when sirup is used. Measurements must be accurate, the cooking utensils used should be flat bottomed, wide to allow for evaporation of water at a rapid rate, and heavy enough so that scorching may be prevented.

Many of our summer fruit crops are expected to be fairly heavy. Sugar or no sugar, we must do canning, in order to prevent waste. Fruit juices may be canned without sugar to use as beverages, or to be made into jams and jellies at a time when more sugar is available.

Sugarless canning is discussed in "War Time Canning Guide," 7 cents by mail. "Mary Meade's Best Jams and Jellies," 25 cents by mail, is another current favorite. Sugar substitutions may be made in any of the recipes in this book. Address orders to Mary Meade, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Old Love Tale Done with War as a Backdrop

"THE CLOCK"

Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, directed by Vincent Minelli, featuring Judy Garland, Robert Walker, James Gleason, Keenan Wynn, Marshall Thompson, Lucile Gleason, Ruth Brady. Presented at the United Artists.

By Mae Tinée

Take shy looking, curly headed, young Robert Walker, put him in an army uniform, drop him in a big city on his last leave before the fateful boat ride; have brown eyed, winsome Judy Garland trip over his sprawling foot—and what have you? . . . of course, it couldn't be anything but a love story!

An old epigram, "love can hope where reason would despair," is nicely illustrated in this appealing, if contrived, romance.

Walker, as Corp. Joe Allen, looks like many of the lonely and timid kids in uniform to be seen in any railroad station these days, and gives his role a straightforward simplicity which makes it extremely effective. Judy, as Alice, seems a bit self-conscious. She's sweet and wholesome and looks like the sort of girl you hope the boys will meet. Joe has 48 hours, has no friends in New York. He's pretty bewildered by the big city, and Alice is very much a lady and knows all about not talking to strange service men even if they do look like the kid next door, but the inevitable happens and they're quickly in love, yet don't quite know what to do about it.

An accident and a drunk, and they meet a happily married middle aged couple who believe in love at first sight, etc. With time at their heels, they rush to the marriage license bureau. Here they bump into rules and regulations, and take quite a beating from them, then convention and the unseemliness and harshness of hasty marriage hits them. The boy is silent and doubtful, and the girl weeping hysterically over a cafeteria dinner shortly after the ceremony.

They've had no ring, no church, no flowers, no families to wish them well, only a hurried and hectic civil marriage, most of which was drowned out by the clatter of nearby trains, and they're a pretty desolate pair. But, this being a love story, don't worry, they're both starry-eyed at the end.

Jimmy Gleason and his wife are a great addition to any film, and you'll enjoy them in this. Keenan Wynn does another of his funny, gabby drunks, and all three help to relieve the intensity of the young leads.

The direction is sensitive to big city atmosphere and Mr. Minelli has injected liberal doses of poignancy and whimsy, but "The Clock" is story book love and romance, and I hope it will not inspire young people to go and do likewise. Excuse me if I remind them that this is just the movies!

Other Wedding News

The garden of the junior George Albert Berrys' home in Hinsdale will be the scene of the marriage at 4 p. m. today of their daughter, Dorothy Jane, and Hal Tillotson Hurn of the naval reserve. The wedding, originally planned for September, was moved ahead because of Mr. Hurn's navy orders. He is enrolled in the medical school of the University of Chicago under the naval reserve program.

With her wedding ensemble Miss Berry, who always is called Jane, will wear the rose-pointe lace veil which belonged to her great-grandmother, Mrs. William Adams of Boston. Miss Berry received her degree yesterday from the University of Chicago, at which her fiancé also took his undergraduate work. She formerly attended the Emma Willard school and Smith college. After a wedding trip to upper Michigan, Mr. Hurn and his bride will live in Chicago while he completes his studies.

Missing their sister's wedding will be Miss Betty Berry, who is stationed with a Red Cross clubmobile unit in Southampton, England, and Lt. George A. Berry III., serving with the 9th army in Germany, who hope to spend their leaves together this month in Europe.

Typical of many weddings which are arranged at long distance these war days is that of Miss Elizabeth Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton C. Jones of Charlotte, N. C., to Lt. Norman R. Boehmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reidar N. Boehmer of Jarvis av., which is taking place at 5 p. m. today in the chapel of the Fourth Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Jones and their daughter, her bridal gown and trousseau, and several relatives including her sister, Miss Alice Jones, who will be maid of honor, arrived yesterday from the south and are staying at the Drake hotel, where a reception will follow the ceremony. The bridegroom will arrive from his post at Truax field, Madison, Wis., some time today. His father will serve as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will remain in Chicago for 10 days so that their daughter and new son-in-law may see them next week-end before going to Madison to live.

Warns X-Ray Film Shortage Perils Health

BY ROY GIBBONS

A congressional probe into present shortages of X-ray film, said to be so acute that the scarcity threatens the nation's health, was demanded yesterday by Mac F. Cahal, executive officer and general counsel of the American College of Radiology, 20 N. Wacker dr.

In a letter to Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.], Cahal, whose organization represents most of the country's radiologists, urged immediate inquiry into the condition by the senate committee on war time health and education or the Mead committee investigating war production.

Cahal charged that lend-lease shipments of X-ray film by the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration and the foreign economic administration and allotments to the army, navy, and United States public health service have reduced film supplies approximately 30 per cent for civilian needs in this country.

X-ray film requirements of civilian physicians and hospitals in the United States approximate 44 million square feet a year, or 11 million square feet a quarter, Cahal explained. During the present quarter a war production board allotment of 9 million square feet probably will be cut to 8 million by the time the quarter ends, he said.

As a result, he asserted, numerous hospitals have only two or three days' supply of film on hand and many radiologists have been compelled to restrict their practices because of a lack of supplies.

"The X-ray, employed by medical specialists in radiology in hospitals and private offices for the diagnosis of disease, is perhaps the most valuable and indispensable technique in the practice of modern medicine," Cahal declared. "The early diagnosis of a large number of disease conditions is impossible without X-ray examinations.

"Under present conditions it is difficult for physicians to obtain an X-ray examination of even acutely ill patients. The result is that untold numbers of sick persons are receiving less than prompt or proper medical care, and normal health services are being threatened in a manner which we believe calls for immediate action by congress."

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 15—Arrived on the "They Were Expendable" set just as the picture was winding up. There was John Ford on crutches, with one leg in a cast up to his hip and Bob Montgomery driving a jeep, with John Wayne beside him. They're on a dock watching a boat being loaded to go out. Bob turns to John and says, "There it is. Do you care?" Wayne gives a jungle cry and says, "Let's go!" and they go, knowing they'll never return. . . . The spirit on that set was the kind that should be in every picture. It's the sort of feeling boys in the service have when they really love their commanding officer. As I watched, John was handed a framed picture of the ship. Underneath the verse, written by Leo Meehan, were names of all those who worked in the picture. John read it thru, then, as his eyes filled with tears, he said "no speeches—take it away."

Only Thinks He's Tough

As Bob Montgomery put his arms around him to say, "Good-by, daddy, thanks for everything," John said, "get on with you, baby, before I break down and cry." Bob went over, picked up Dan Borzage's [Frank's brother] accordion, which Dan played thruout the picture, and Bob had learned to play while they were working together. Bob played Bing Crosby's "Tu-ra-lu-ra-lu-ra-lu." . . . Dan Borzage tells me he played his accordion thru the Florida swamps, on landing barges, and beaches—wherever the fellows needed the mood, he was in there with his music, just like the bagpiper in "Desert Victory" who marched with the boys and kept blowing his pipes. That was the only weapon he carried. . . . Lt. Ernest Saftig, technical director, has been in this war 42 months. He goes right back to it. . . . Talked with Jack Holt. He has the best role of his life. Jack had a letter from his son, Timmy. Remember Tim Holt in those R. K. O. pictures? Tim is flying a B-29 called Reluctant Dragon—and underneath that name is written, "Is This Trip Necessary?" He's a bombardier. Wrote his father names of islands he's flown over and on which he dropped calling cards to the Japs. Then added, "don't expect me to pronounce these names when I get home." And as an afterthought, wrote, "gee, pop, I hope my fans won't forget me while I'm away." I don't think they will, Timmy.

Truly It Was Great

The spirit on that set was the spirit we had in the old days. Picture making was fun then. When you'd finish the day's work at six, you'd gather in one of the dressing rooms, listen to composers play and sing their latest songs, or you'd enjoy Larry Tibbett or Grace Moore rehearsing their music for the following day, or go to the sound stage and watch dancers perfecting their steps. Mickey Neilan always had a five-piece orchestra on his set. If he liked you he'd stop shooting and give you a concert for a couple of hours. When he went back to work, everybody felt so good they'd make up those hours. Marion Davies had her own orchestra. Norma Shearer had a piano player for years. It was all fun, and you didn't care how late you stayed. If you got hungry, you'd send to the commissary for a sandwich and cup of coffee, and keep right on till midnight. You loved your job. You'd rather be there than any place in the world. . . . Now I'm afraid studios are pretty much like factories. When the whistle blows at six, the place clears in nothing flat. People rush home, change clothes, go to some night club to be entertained, to spend dough. Yet what they've left is the greatest entertainment anywhere. A studio's the place where you build entertainment, and the fun you're having while doing it gets onto that screen. Believe me, the camera is a sensitive animal, even tho it is only a mechanical device.

Be Poised to Cure Shyness, Girl Advised

BY SHEILA JOHN DALY

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Even the best laid plans of mice and men get off the beam occasionally but when a gal's plans NEVER seem to come out right, there's a problem. And it gives out this way:

"I am a very bashful girl altho I have in the past three years outgrown some of it. It isn't that I am unfriendly but when I am introduced to some one, I try very hard and yet can never find the right thing to say. I am so ill at ease that I make every one else uneasy with my shyness. I know that I am not a pretty girl, but I didn't think that mattered so much. I find I can get along quite well with boys and girls in groups but when I happen to meet a fellow when I am alone, I can barely manage to say more than "hello." I remember two years ago when, if I saw a boy coming down the street, I would cross over to the other side just to avoid having to meet him. When I walk into a room I feel as if every one is looking at me because I am stupid or because I am doing something wrong. I am just not good company for any one. I would so like to be confident and have fun like other girls. . . ."

Are you sure that all the other girls are "confident and having fun"? There is hardly a gal in the world who doesn't go thru that worried, "how am I doing?" stage somewhere between 12 and 21. Honey chiles in pigtails and pinafores don't have much to worry about except cutting out paper dolls and whether to play house on Tuesday or Wednesday, but once a gal is old enough to realize that she's on her own, that it's up to her to make friends and influence dateable fellows if she wants to have fun—that's when the worry begins.

It takes "practice" to be poised and charming and it takes practice to be a good conversationalist. Take advantage of all the practice you can get and week by week you'll find yourself gaining confidence. One important thing to remember—shyness may often be mistaken for snobbishness so take your nose out of the air, Mrs. Astor. You just let a friend go by!

Kitchen Pointers

By Mary Meade

"How does the keeping power of vegetable shortening compare with that of butter?"

Vegetable shortening keeps better. As long as it's free from rancid odor and flavor, it's safe to use. This may be as long as a year. On the other hand, butter must be kept in the refrigerator and, if not kept in a closed container, may become rancid in a few weeks, since it absorbs odors and flavors easily.

"Is there a good way of refreshening butter after it turns rancid?"

If the butter has just turned rancid, a fair measure of freshness can be restored by washing the butter in fresh milk, then in fresh water to remove the milk. Butter rancidity is due to the formation of butyric acid, which is readily absorbed by fresh milk. But this method is good only if the butter is newly rancid.

"I have seen a fruit on the markets which is new to me; called the mango. How is it used?"

The mange is a tropical fruit, very expensive at present. It has a reddish-yellow outside, the yellower skin indicating greater ripeness. The delicious flavor is a cross between that of peach and cantaloupe, altho the fruit is not as firm as either of these. Instead, it is very juicy and soft, with a fragrance all its own. The ripe fruit is good in salads or to eat fresh. Unripe mangos are used in making East Indian chutneys.

"Is the thick rind on Camembert cheese edible?"

A medium sized banana contains 100 calories.

"Is there a good test for determining the freshness of eggs?"

None to use in the home other than the shape of the broken egg. That is, when the egg is broken into a saucer, if the yolk is round and upstanding and the white is thick and stands around the yolk, the egg is fresh. If the yolk is flat and the white thin, the egg is not fresh.

18 ARE KILLED AS FAST TRAIN HITS FREIGHT

Broken Journal Blamed for Accident

Milton, Pa., June 15 (AP)—Eighteen persons were killed and 30 injured in a collision here early today between the Pennsylvania railroad's Dominion Express and a freight train thrown into its path by a broken journal.

The 14 car Washington to Buffalo express thundered at 55 miles an hour into the 34th car of the freight train, proceeding in the opposite direction along a parallel track, with a crash a soldier described as "louder than anything I heard on European battle fronts."

No warning was possible as the locomotive plowed into the freight car, knocking 20 other freight cars from the tracks and pulling seven cars behind it off the rails.

Bodies Wedged in Wreckage

As the din of the crash subsided, the screams of passengers injured and trapped rose from the smashed coaches. Passengers aboard seven sleeping cars which remained on the tracks were shaken but joined in rescue efforts quickly spurred by hundreds of residents of the surrounding countryside who had been aroused by the shattering noise.

Hours after the crash, only seven bodies had been extricated. Others were wedged in the wreckage.

Engine Stripped

J. N. Gamble, Harrisburg, ticket collector, said "there was one bump and I saw the glass of the door at the end of the car coming at me before I realized that I was flying thru the air. . . . The worst thing of all was the engine. It was still on the track, but the mechanical parts outside were stripped off and the tank had split away. Lying on the ground was the engineer. He was dead."

A broken journal also was blamed for the Pennsylvania railroad's Congressional Limited wreck of Labor day, 1943, in Philadelphia in which 79 died.

FORTY HURT IN ANTIGO

Antigo, Wis., June 15 (AP)—A southbound Chicago and North Western passenger train struck a switch engine in the north yards late last night, resulting in minor injuries to an estimated 40 to 50 passengers and delaying traffic for 4½ hours. The accident occurred as the switch engine was backing onto a siding to permit passage of the Chicago-Ashland Limited.

43 HURT IN OREGON

Portland, Ore., June 15 (AP)—An outbound interurban electric car and an inbound freight train collided head-on here late yesterday, injuring 43 passengers. The crash occurred on a curve where brush obstructed visibility.

EIGHT WORKERS KILLED

ASKS KANSAS KEEP ITS MEAT FOR OWN USE

Salina, Kas., June 15 (AP)—Asserting the meat situation demands drastic action, Mayor J. H. Moore of Salina today asked Gov. Andrew Schoeppel "to assert our state right" and order Kansas packing plants "to take care of Kansas' needs."

If necessary, he said in a telegram to the governor, "take over these plants and run them until these senseless [OPA] quota restrictions are relinquished."

Moore said "We have plenty of Kansas hogs and cattle and Kansas packing plants, so why can't they be used to feed Kansas people? We are shipping many hundreds of both cattle and hogs from this territory each week to the big packers and none of it comes back."

TAXICAB DRIVER HELD TO JURY IN $1,000 RING THEFT

Nathan Burman, 43, of 3743 W. 15th st., a taxicab driver, was held to the grand jury by Judge John J. Griffin in Felony court yesterday on a charge of larceny. He is accused of stealing a $1,000 diamond ring from Leland D. Carris, 45, of Washington, Ia. Burman asserted that the ring, which he turned over to police when arrested, was given to him by Carris as security for cab fare. Carris told police he had some drinks with Miss Frankie Fitch, 21, of 640 N. Wabash av. and his memory was a blank from then until he awakened later in a doorway at 900 S. Racine av. Miss Fitch has been freed.

U. S. Seeks to Delay Its Reply in Haupt Appeal

DAY by DAY on the FARM by BEN MARKLAND

June 15, 1945.

SUMMER'S official inauguration is dated for next week, but farm people ignore the calendar in judging the start of summertime. Their verdict is drawn from the wildflowers in the fields and along the rail fences; the field jobs being done by the farm workers; the progress of their kitchen gardens; activities of farm youngsters now out of school, and the antics of songsters and game birds that they see every day.

Several typical summer wildflowers are on view this week. The first wild roses have opened their buds, showing their delicate pink petals at the edges of oak woodlots and along the fences. No wildflower is more characteristic of rural summertime than the rose.

Dainty Wild Rose on Show

It is outnumbered by the yellow moth mulleins and the ox-eye daisies, other additions to this week's wildflower show, and it is modest in its choice of habitat. However, farm folks would rather find one wild rose partly hidden by shrubs alongside a field fence than a hundred mulleins or daisies flaunting their yellow and white petals in open fields.

Another typical summer flower newly arrived is the toadflax. This attractive plant has many names, and among farm people it is known as wild snapdragon, butter and eggs, brideweed, and flaxweed.

Toadflax in Lush Growth

Of these, butter and eggs is most descriptive because the petals have the light yellow hue of butter and the corolla is the bright orange of a fresh egg yolk. There's nothing subdued about the toadflax this season. Numerous spring rains have given the plants a lush growth with flower stalks more than 14 inches tall.

The wild roses, toadflax, daisies, and other new wildflowers provide a colorful introduction to summer, but from a practical standpoint the farm people are more interested in the inconspicuous white flowers they are seeing on the bush peas in their vegetable gardens. Peas prefer a cool, moist growing season, so they have thrived under those conditions. In all of the farm gardens the vines are loaded with flowers that promise a high yield of fresh peas for tables and for canning and freezing.

★ The GARDEN ★

ONE of the common gardening errors is that of plucking or cutting off the first blossoms of tomatoes, peppers, and other vegetable plants. This probably originated from the fact that the first blossoms of snapdragons, zinnias, and other annual flowers may be eliminated to promote early season leaf growth. Workers of the sample garden on the Wheaton farm never eliminate any blossoms from vegetable plants.

This is especially important in the culture of tomatoes; the first blossoms produce the earliest and best flavored fruits. Gardeners anxious to produce July tomatoes, therefore, should allow the first blossoms to develop.

In addition, there is a new hormone product on the market that can be sprayed into the blossoms to encourage early fruiting. The manufacturers claim that it fertilizes, prevents blossoms from falling, stimulates fruit growth, and produces fruits five to 10 days earlier than natural fertilization. This hormone product will be tested in the farm gardens.

CUTLER PLEDGES ACTION ON 'LOST' CEMETERY BILLS

Claims They Are Being Bottled Up

BY GEORGE TAGGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., June 15—Rep. Cutler [R., Lewistown] told his associates today that some influence is keeping the cemetery regulation bills off the house calendar, thus far making it impossible to call them up for passage. He said that on Monday he will take action to dig the bills out.

"It appears that orders from an unknown source are keeping the bills bottled up in the house enrolling and engrossing division," Cutler said. "Whatever is the trouble, it's high time that we put a stop to it."

After a battle Tuesday over an amendment that transferred regulatory powers from Atty. Gen. Barrett to State Auditor Lueder, the bills were ordered advanced to third reading—the passage stage. They have not appeared on the printed house calendar since then. Routine stenographic work must be performed on them in the enrolling and engrossing division.

Speaker Denies Pressure

Speaker Hugh Green [R., Jacksonville], as presiding officer of the house, was told about Rep. Cutler's charge.

"I haven't given any orders not to enroll and engross the bills," he said. "This is the first I've heard of some one suspecting they're being held up."

Emma Jo Rodems, enrolling and engrossing chief, was asked about the matter.

"We're covered with work and have been working day and night for weeks trying to catch up," she said.

Asked when the bills can be expected to appear on the house calendar, she replied: "I don't know."

"Peculiar" Circumstances

In some quarters it was considered peculiar that none of the house members politically affiliated with Auditor Lueder's office had called attention to what Cutler termed "the disappearance" of the bills.

Atty. Gen. Barrett charged a week ago that Democratic opponents of the legislation were in league with Auditor Lueder to take the regulatory powers out of Barrett's office as a preliminary to defeating the bills. Leading the cemetery lobby are former Gov. John Stelle and Federal District Atty. Howard Doyle, Democrats. Barrett and Lueder are Republicans.

Altho opponents had said Barrett would lose interest in the bills if the Lueder amendment was adopted, the attorney general has continued to work among house members in support of the attempt to halt what he describes as a "multi-million dollar cemetery racket."

Sinon A. Murray, Lueder's legislative contact man, said he is exerting his efforts in behalf of the bills.

WMC TO RELAX CONTROLS OVER WOMEN IN JOBS

Three new orders relaxing war man power commission controls over women workers in the Chicago area will go into effect next Wednesday, William H. Spencer, Chicago regional WMC director, announced yesterday. The changes are:

1. Women workers no longer will be required to be referred thru the United States employment service.

2. Statements of availability for the transfer of women who have been in essential activities for 60 days will be issued by employers but such statements will be good only in other essential activities.

3. Ceilings on total employment will be eliminated but existing ceilings on male employment will be retained.

Other changes in man power restrictions are remote, however, Spencer said, and predicted that Chicago "will continue either in a group I. [critical] classification or at least in a group II. [scarce] classification until the war with Japan is over.

Art Dealer and Ex-Fiance Settle Battle Over Gifts

A settlement was reached yesterday in the suit of Mrs. Ann Conkey, manager of an art gallery at 813 N. Rush st., to recover a diamond ring, paintings, and other property which she valued at $1,500 from her former fiance, Louis Rousseau of 22 Banks st., a voice teacher. The case was dismissed by Municipal Judge Cecil C. Smith. Under the settlement Rousseau is to pay $250 and return all of Mrs. Conkey's property. Rousseau asserted he already had returned the ring.

U. S. 'DEPRESSION SUBDIVISIONS' GO AT 50c ON $1

Washington, D. C., June 15 [Special]—A loss of about 50 per cent has been taken by the government on its sale of subsistence homesteads in its gradual move out of that depression born business.

Already 18 of 31 projects created in 1933-'34 to provide jobs and homes have been disposed of completely. These do not include farm projects. In addition, practically all houses in five others have been sold to residents and the federal public housing authority now is planning to complete their liquidation as well as that of the eight remaining projects.

Tenants Get Buying Priority

Sixteen of the liquidated homesteads were bought by coöperative associations formed by the homesteaders. Those living in the projects are given first chance to buy the homes and plants with offers of federal loans.

The cost of building the family units in the 16 projects was $5,327,927, or an average of $4,682 a unit. They were sold for $2,601,772, or an average of $2,286.

In the remaining two already sold—in Lake county, Illinois, and at Macomb Gardens, Miss.—residents bought the homes and the government turned over without charge such community facilities as schools.

The 16 projects sold to coöperatives are located in or near Austin, Minn.; Duluth, Minn.; Decatur, Ind.; Palmerdale, Ala.; Mount Olive, Ala.; Bessemer, Ala.; Jasper, Ala.; Beaumont, Tex.; Houston, Tex.; Arlington, Tex.; Wichita Falls, Tex.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Reseda, Cal.; Elmonte, Cal.; Longview, Wash., and Granger, Ia.

Hosiery Mills Sold at Loss

Three of seven industrial plants set up by the government to provide jobs for residents of some of the projects also have been sold, at a 17 per cent loss. A syndicate composed of three private firms yesterday paid $1,200,000 for the plants—hosiery mills at Jasper, Ala.; Crossville, Tenn., and Eleanor, W. Va.

A pants factory at Westmoreland, Pa., and an airplane parts and radio signal plant at Arthurdale, W. Va., are under lease to private firms for war production and will not be sold at least until after the war.

The federal security agency meanwhile is disposing of more than 100 farm subsistence homesteads under direction of congress. All the projects first were administered by the resettlement administration, later transferred to FSA and, in 1942, the other-than-farm projects were placed under FPHA.

U.S. OBJECTIONS DELAY ACTION ON CANAL-ROAD BILL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 15—Objections made by the interior department are delaying action on a senate bill giving the state of Illinois title to the Illinois and Michigan canal right of way for highway purposes, Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] said in an interview today.

The interior department was asked to study the measure by the senate public lands committee, to which the bill was referred after its introduction by Lucas May 3, because the canal is routed thru public lands. Ninety feet of right of way on each side of the canal would be transferred to the state by the bill.

Lucas said he had not been advised what the interior department's objections were but did not believe they would prevent passage of the bill.

SCOUTS TRAVEL ON BUSES TO CAMP THIS YEAR

Chicago area Boy Scouts will travel to their summer camp in Owasippe, Mich., in buses this year instead of trains, scout officials announced yesterday. Previously special trains carried 3,000 scouts to the camp. The office of defense transportation has banned the use of special trains during the war and advised the scouts to use buses not needed to transport troops. Scout officials said seven buses will run two days a week and carry approximately 250 boys on each trip.

GREW DISCLAIMS BIAS AGAINST 6 IN SECRETS CASE

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—Acting Secretary of State Grew denied today in a statement that six persons recently arrested on charges of conspiring to violate war secrecy laws were being punished because of their ideas.

He apparently referred to published assertions that three of the arrested persons—two state department employes and a naval intelligence officer—disagreed with state department policy concerning China and believed that more support should be thrown to the Chinese Communists.

"There isn't any mystery about this at all," Grew said. "There was no consideration whatever of any ideas or ideals held by any individual concerned. The investigation was held to find the facts about a traffic in secret documents affecting national defense."

John S. Service and Emmanuel Larsen, both state department experts on the far east, are the government employes involved in the case.

YOUNG MOTHER WINS PLACE IN MUSIC FINALS

Mrs. Miriam Mills Cousins, 25, of 1315 Monroe st., Evanston, a lyric soprano and mother of three children, advanced to the finals of the first Evanston Music festival last night in Cahn auditorium of Scott hall on Northwestern university's campus. It was the first contest for Mrs. Cousins, whose husband, Lloyd W., is in the army at Fort Riley, Kas.

Mrs. Cousins will compete for "best singer" honors of the festival tonight in the auditorium against David L. Glismann, 21, of 562 Lincoln st., Evanston, a bass-baritone, who won the men's contest Monday. The contest is a preliminary to THE TRIBUNE'S 16th annual Chicago Music festival.

More than 800 persons attended last night's program, which featured selections by Mark Love, bass-baritone of the Chicago Opera company; Clair Omar Musser, marimba-vibraharp virtuoso, and a surprise guest, Andre Rosse, concert pianist, who was presented by Musser.

WAGE INCREASES GRANTED TO 1,475 PHONE WORKERS

The war labor board in Washington, D. C., granted wage increases ranging from 92 cents to $2.27 weekly to 1,475 members of the Commercial Telephone Workers' union employed in the Chicago area by the Illinois Bell Telephone company.

The union, which is affiliated with the National Federation of Telephone Workers, is made up of clerical workers, service engineers, and coin box collectors.

Edwin Hackett, legal representative of the union, said the adjustments are retroactive to May 28, 1944. The order, he said, also set the contract termination date at June 11, 1946, and provided for immediate wage contract negotiations.

WHEELER ASKS U. S. KEEP WIRE SETUP ABROAD

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—Senator Wheeler [D., Mont.] just back from Europe and the Mediterranean area, said today the United States should insist on maintaining its own communications system in that area.

"We should take it up at the peace conference," he said in an interview. "It is of great importance to business men and to freedom of news and communications between this country and that part of the world. The system is already established. Our army has set up the best communications system in the world today."

As chairman of the interstate commerce committee, Wheeler headed a senate group which went to Europe at the request of the army and navy to inspect communications and consider the question of post-war disposition of those facilities.

CUBS WIN 2; VANDENBERG YIELDS REDS 1 HIT

HOOP JR. AND PAVOT CLASH IN PREAKNESS TODAY

DERBY WINNER TOP CHOICE FOR $68,170 PURSE

Field of 9 to Start on Fast Track

Take Your Pick

BALTIMORE, Md., June 15 (AP)—Probable lineup for the 55th running of the Preakness stakes at Pimlico tomorrow, with owners, jockeys, and probable odds, listed according to post positions:

Horse	Owner	Jockey	Odds
Pavot	W. M. Jeffords	Wolf	2-1
Hoop Jr.	F. W. Hooper	Snider	8-5
Bohanet	B. Livie	Clark	40-1
Sea Swallow	C. S. Howard	Woodhouse	25-1
Alexis	H. Lunger	Scawthorn	12-1
Darby Dieppe	Mrs. W. Lewis	Calvert	8-1
Polynesian	Mrs. F. Widener	Wright	10-1
The Doge	Pentagon Stable	Gilbert	50-1
Adonis	Wm. Helis	Re'escheid	20-1

[All will carry 126 pounds.]

Baltimore, Md., June 15 (AP)—The 55th and richest of all Preakness stakes will be run over Pimlico's mile and three-sixteenth distance tomorrow with Hoop Jr., winner of the Kentucky Derby, the favorite to whip eight other 3 year olds and gain the second section of the American turf's triple crown.

Headliner of a one day program that will see renewal of five stakes and upwards of $165,000 distributed in purses, the Preakness will offer three horses that trailed Hoop Jr. in the Derby a chance to prove that the muddy going at Churchill Downs was not to their liking. The weather man has promised a fast racing strip and midsummer temperature for tomorrow.

Challenger Works Well

The chief opposition to the speedy bay from F. W. Hooper's Jacksonville, Fla., stable is expected to come from Walter Jeffords' Pavot—a colt that was unbeaten as a two year old but was defeated by a narrow margin in his only start this season. Pavot was not entered in the Derby.

Hoop Jr. has worked well since arriving from Louisville early in the week but, by contrast, Pavot has been sensational in morning trials. The son of Case Ace and a Man O' War mare turned the Preakness distance in 1:59 1-5. The stake record of 1:57 was made by Alsab in 1942. The track record is 1:56 2-5.

As the result of Hoop Jr.'s known speed and ability to go the route and Pavot's workout, following his defeat by Mrs. P. A. B. Widener's Polynesian in the Withers mile at Belmont Park, they are likely to be the favorites of a record crowd of 50,000 at 8 to 5 and 2 to 1, respectively.

Woolf Knows Pavot

Georgie Woolf, only jockey in the race with a Preakness victory to his credit, will be up on Pavot with whom he won six races as a juvenile. With Eddie Arcaro held in New York by his contract employer, Al Snider will pilot Hoop Jr. He'll be the seventh jockey that has ridden the son of Sir Galahad III. in nine races. Arcaro has won twice with him in compiling a record of four victories, three seconds, and a fourth in eight starts.

In battling for the winner's share of the record purse of $87,670, the colt that Hooper bought as a yearling for $10,200 and then turned over to Ivan Parke to train will attempt to overcome his Pimlico jinx. He met defeat three times in five starts last year, and all of the setbacks were at Pimlico. The winner's share of the purse will gross $68,170 if all nine face the starter at 4:12 p. m. [E. W. T.]

There'll Be Others

Altho Hoop Jr. and Pavot figure to fight it out in the three-sixteenths of a mile home stretch, there was plenty of confidence today around the barns of Mrs. W. G. Lewis' Darby Dieppe, Alexis of the Christiana stable, owned by Henry Lunger, C. S. Howard's Sea Swallow, and Mrs. Widener's Polynesian.

Darby Dieppe was a fast charging third in the Derby. Alexis battled for the early lead as Hoop Jr. scored a front running victory at the Downs and Trainer Jack Healey definitely believes he'll do better on a fast track. Sea Swallow also is expected to improve on a fast strip. Polynesian fought it out for six furlongs with Hoop Jr. in the latter's Wood Memorial victory before whipping Pavot in the Withers.

The other entries—Bobanet from Bruce Livie's Bobanet stable, William Helis' Adonis, and The Doge, owned by the Pentagon stable of Mrs. Jay Secor, and Barclay Henry—are rank outsiders.

The $30,000 added Dixie handicap, a test of a mile and three-sixteenths, heads the remainder of the program of a meeting held to one day since Pimlico ran off its regular session soon after the racing ban was lifted early in May.

Chanute Field Defeats Peoria Caterpillars, 3-1

Chanute Field, Ill., June 15 [Special]—Chanute Field's baseball team won over the Peoria Caterpillars today, 3 to 1. Chanute scored their two winning runs in the eighth inning when Jake Roach scored on a squeeze play and Henry Clifton scored on a bunt also.

IT'S GOOD BET WINNER'S HERE

Hoop Jr., winner of Kentucky Derby last week and 8 to 5 favorite to take top money in $50,000 added Preakness stakes at Pimlico today. He is owned by F. W. Hooper.

Walter M. Jeffords' Pavot, top ranking juvenile last year, looms as Hoop Jr.'s chief rival in Preakness. He is listed at 2 to 1.

Six Route Runners Named for Lincoln Fields La Salle Today

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

The eighth running of Lincoln Fields' $5,000 added La Salle handicap today at Hawthorne has drawn a field of six route steppers headed by the Happy Hour farm's top weighted Devalue.

The mile and three-sixteenths affair, won last year by John Marsch's Valdina Foe, is the fifth of a series of six stake races on the Lincoln Fields spring program which closes next Saturday with the 18th annual mile and one-quarter Lincoln handicap, oldest of the Crete track's fixtures.

Take Wing Has Backing

Altho Devalue has been allotted the heaviest impost, Mrs. Clyde Troutt's veteran campaigner, Take Wing, probably will be the early choice in the wagering, even tho Hyman Friedberg will send Bolo's Choice postward with Apprentice Billy Nichols, the track's leading jockey, in the saddle. Eugene White will ride Devalue and Jess Higley will be aboard Take Wing.

The remainder of the field includes the Swanee River stable's Corydon, H. E. Jacoby's Good Bid, and Mrs. Jeannette Hoaglin's Amalka.

A sprint race at six and one-half furlongs for a purse of $2,500 also is on the card and has attracted Friedberg's Harriet Sue, S. D. Sidell's St. Jock, A. S. Higgins' Quizzle, Leon Tikulski's Icangetit, H. L. King's Bolo Tie, and Mrs. Karl Mayer's Whose and Some Man.

Double Pays $69.60

The meeting has been attracting good crowds. Yesterday 11,472 were on hand for a card topped by an $1,800 purse event for older horses. Those who invested in the right daily double tickets received $69.60 for each $2 after H. W. Ostle's Genie's Mate had taken the first race and J. F. Nazworthy's Simony's Boy the second. Genie's Mate was ridden by Aullie Carr and paid $15.40. Jack Flitter put over Simony's Boy at $9.80. The mutuel handle was $774,742.

Rush Act Wins Feature

J. H. Miles' 5 year old Rush Act accounted for the main event, his first victory in six starts this season. He was ridden by Nichols and hit the wire a length in front of Happy Hour farm's Happy Pilot with Bobby Campbell up. Mrs. P. Leon's Sand Storm, an outsider, was third in a field of six.

The winner, held in fourth place most of the way around in the mile and sixteenth event, got up in the stretch. Rush Act returned $6.80, $3.40, and $2.60 across the board.

Handicap Field

SIX horses were named in overnight entries for the $5,000 La Salle handicap, a mile and three-sixteenths event for 3 year olds and up, the Lincoln Fields feature race at Hawthorne today. The field:

Horse	Wgt.	Jockey	Prob. odds
Devalue	114	E. White	8-1
Bolo's Choice	112	B. Nichols	4-1
Good Bid	110	R. Campbell	12-1
Take Wing	112	J. Higley	2-1
Corydon	113	No boy	8-1
Amalka	105	No boy	20-1

Fight Decisions

At New York—Ray [Sugar] Robinson stopped Jimmy M'Daniels [2]; Joe Reddick beat Van McNutt [6]; Bobby Berger beat Tom Collins [6]; Al Seidman beat Antonio Carmonia [4]; Al La Barba beat Jimmy Pierce [4]; Jimmy Rizzo stopped Juan Carrero [3].

At Detroit—Lou Nova stopped Howard Fenske [9].

At Minneapolis—Tony Olivera beat Louis Castillo [15]; Buzz Brown beat Dave Riley [6].

FOREMAN WINS IN 2D ROUND OF STATE GOLF

'44 Champion Meets Moreland Today

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Four champions, two able public links players, an 18 year old collegian, and a twice-wounded army sergeant will comprise the quarterfinal field this morning at the St. Charles country club for the 15th annual state tournament conducted by the Chicago district golf association.

The titleholders, led by Harold Foreman, Jr., who won the crown in Peoria last summer, include Gus Moreland of Peoria, winner in 1940; Jim Frisina of Taylorville, who scored in 1942 and George Dawson of Glen Oak, the champion of 1939 and 1941.

The army veteran is slender Walter Burkemo, now on leave from Fletcher General hospital of Cambridge, O. Before he went overseas with the 7th army, Walt was one of the potential greats of American golf. A back brace which he has been wearing as a result of wounds suffered in Belgium and France did not keep the Evanston blonde from reaching this morning's quarterfinals, in the third match of which he will meet Frisina. In winning his record round match from Earl Gocke of Calumet, 5 and 4, the sergeant was one under par for the route.

Atten Rallies to Win

The collegian is young Jack Atten of Edgewater, protege of Chick Evans. Jack, No. 1 man on the Northwestern university team last spring, had a rough go of it with the veteran Nello Campagni of Highwood. Two up after 16 holes, Atten found himself cut down by a Campaigni birdie on the 17th. Jack then hammered a 7 iron less than a yard from the cup at the 135 yard eighteenth for a deuce and a two up triumph.

This morning Atten will meet George Dawson who was playing big league golf before Jack was born. George moved along to the big eight with a 4 and 4 decision against Wayne Carrico of Decatur, following thru by beating Frank Kovack of Bonnie Brook, 5 and 4.

Vicini, Mathisen Impressive

Dante Vicini of Ottawa, former Cook county champ, and Harold Mathisen of St. Andrew's, one of the two men to win the city amateur crown four times [Chick Evans is the other], made their moves with convincing golf. Mathisen, one under in the morning, earned the right to meet Dante this morning by defeating Bob Grimm, Glen Oak champion, 4 and 2. Vicini eliminated Don Armstrong of Aurora, 1933 state victor, 4 and 3, in a second round argument. Grimm had won his first round duel with Marine Sgt. John Gostele of Elgin, who shared the qualifying medal at 150 with Frisina in Thursday's 36 hole medal play test.

Foreman, if he would be the fourth man to win the championship twice, must have swings against Moreland, who after a sorry morning round bounced back with the best nine of the show, a front side of 33 against Jack Purdum of Dallas City which revealing the holing of a 75 yard wedge shot and a pair of 50 foot putts.

QUARTER-FINAL PAIRINGS

Foreman vs. Moreland, 9:00 a. m.
Vicini vs. Mathisen, 9:05 a. m.
Frisina vs. Burkemo, 9:10 a. m.
Atten vs. Dawson, 9:15 a. m.

Second Round Results

Foreman defeated Hammond, 4 and 3.
Moreland defeated Purdum, 6 and 4.
Vicini defeated Armstrong, 4 and 3.
Mathison defeated Grimm, 4 and 2.
Frisina defeated Kletzke, 4 and 3.
Burkemo defeated Gocke, 5 and 4.
Atten defeated Campagni, 2 up.
Dawson defeated Kovack, 5 and 4.

Quarter-Final Pairings

Foreman vs. Moreland, 9:00 a. m.
Vicini vs. Mathisen, 9:05 a. m.
Frisina vs. Burkemo, 9:10 a. m.

ROBINSON'S NOT SLIPPING: K. O.S M'DANIELS IN 2D

New York, June 15 (AP) — Ray [Sugar] Robinson replied to criticism that he was slipping by knocking out Jimmy McDaniels tonight in the second round of a scheduled 10 round bout in Madison Square Garden.

The "uncrowned welterweight champion" who did not look so good in his last two fights against Jake Lamotta and Jose Basora, put his Los Angeles opponent down for the count in 1:23 of the second round after the bell had cheated him of a first round knockout.

The ease with which he makes his influence felt in major league company indicates the night baseball problem eventually will be back where he wants it—seven home games a club. . . . A private first class in the marine corps is equivalent to a second lieutenant in the infantry." . . . The general notified his son it was all right for him to think a P. F. C. in the marine corps is equal to a second lieutenant in the infantry but he never should tell a second lieutenant of infantry about his thought or he will be in the brig. . . . Father Takes a Bow

Likewise a merited citation
From moms and kids thruout the nation,
For fine performance all the year
In behalf of those he holds most dear.
A lot depends on dad, you know,
For youthful appetites will grow,
And clothes wear out, and nothing stays
The same as in the yesterdays.
Dad's wisdom also must enfold
The problems of the young and old.
There's junior's home work, and the choice
Of daughter's dates requires his voice.
When stumped on one thing or another,
Pop says, "I'm busy, ask your mother";
But on the whole we all agree
Dad carries on amazingly.

Or might he be

COACHES—Harry Dixon, Fenger; Harry Kellar, Austin.
1944 CHAMPION—Lane Tech.

Prep sports competition for the season will be concluded today when the Titans of Fenger meet Austin High school's Tigers in Wrigley field for the City league baseball championship.

Fenger, south section champion with a record of 12 victories and two defeats, advanced to the final round of the play-offs by shutting out Kelvyn Park, 8 to 0, in the first round, and defeating Harrison, 9 to 7, in an extra inning second round game. Austin likewise scored a shutout victory in the quarterfinals, a 4 to 0 triumph over Bowen. In the semi-finals, Austin routed Farragut, 9 to 1.

Fenger Seeks First Title

The Titans, coached by Harry Dixon, will be seeking their first public school baseball title. Austin will attempt to again win a title which has eluded it for more than 20 years. The Tigers won the championship in 1905 and 1922.

The Austin nine, coached by Harry Kellar, will seek to give the west side school its second league title this year in a major sport. The Austin football team, along with Tilden Tech, shares the public school and city football title.

Each team in today's contest was an upset victor in the play-offs, and goes into the championship contest on even terms. The pre-season favorite and defending champion, Lane Tech, which won the state tournament in Peoria, was ousted by Harrison in the quarter-finals.

Judge to Face Johanson

Kellar has named Tony Judge, star right hander, to start on the mound for Austin. Judge fanned 10 and limited Farragut to four hits as he led the Tigers to their semi-final victory.

Judge's mound opponent will be Ralph Johanson, a right hander with lots of speed, who likewise was a victor in the semi-finals. He gave up nine hits as Fenger beat Harrison.

Sox, Detroit Rained Out; Play 2 Today

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

What the weather man might refer to humorously as a deluge added another delay yesterday to the already overdue 1945 debut of Detroit's Tigers in Comiskey park. They were supposed to play the White Sox last evening under the lights, but, after surveying the premises and listening to what the weather man had to say about prospects, Vice President Harry Grabiner decided it would be advisable to call off everything until 1:30 this afternoon, when a double header will be launched.

Last night's washout, added to the three game series erased when the present first placers made their initial trip here earlier in the season makes for a complicated schedule but, with luck, the matter may be straightened out before the end of September. One of the two today is a play-off and the Monday game, now scheduled as a night attraction, will be another.

Lopat, Humphries to Start

The unexpected idleness of last evening gave Boss Jim Dykes a chance at a little more juggling of his pitching talent. With six games in four days, he figured on Buck Ross and Bill Dietrich working among four others who are more or less established in the manager's book.

Ross was to get his second test this afternoon, but that's been changed. Instead, Ed Lopat, who was billed for an act last night, will pair up with Johnny Humphries. Tomorrow's original duo, Joe Haynes and Thornton Lee, remains intact.

Bill May Work Monday

But for the Monday night playoff Dykes, if the weather doesn't cause more alterations, is going to decide between Ross and Dietrich. The latter who hasn't pitched since the bone chips were removed from his pitching arm will get the assignment if he agrees that the artificial sunshine won't bother him after his long layoff.

Chicagoans Climb to 4th Place

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Cincinnati, O., June 15—A lazy fly by Al Libke to short left, on which Peanuts Lowrey barely missed a shoestring catch, was all that kept Hy Vandenberg from pitching a no hitter tonight in his first 1945 start for the Cubs. The Cubs won this one hitter 3 to 0, their first night victory of the year, after Claude Passeau had turned in a stellar job of pitching to lead the Chicagoans to an 8 to 1 victory in the twilight phase of the double header.

Vandenberg's brilliant success was the first night success of the Cubs in five tries under the lamps this season, and gave the Chicagoans a string of seven straight over the Reds in as many engagements. The double victory lifted the Cubs into the first division, 3½ games back of the leading Pirates, 3 behind the Dodgers, and 2½ from the third place Giants.

Hy Vandenberg

Claude Passeau

Cavarretta Leads Attack

Only one Cincy player reached base after the second inning of the night game. That was Libke, who walked in the sixth, and never got to second. The Reds' one hit came after Vandenberg had thrown out Dain Clay in the first inning. Libke stayed on second while Frank McCormick walked then Steve Mesner flied to Andy Pafko. In the second inning Al Unser walked, Woody Williams flied out and Eddie Miller was hit by a pitched ball. Then Bucky Walters hit into a double play. That was all there was to the Reds' offense.

Capt. Phil Cavarretta, restored to first base with the departure of Heinz Becker for his expected induction in Dallas, was the batting leader in both games. In the first game he drove in the two runs essential to victory with a first inning single, singled his next time up, knocked his No. 2 homer of the year his third time up and walked and scored after his fourth trip to the plate. In the first inning of the second game he tripled to drive home Bill Nicholson with what proved to be the winning run. He also singled his next time up. He walked his fourth time up. He thus failed to get on base only once in nine trips to the plate.

Passeau Wins No. 5

Passeau, who is specializing this season in spanking the Reds, punished his cousins for the third time. It was Passeau's fifth National league victory of the year.

The first three Cubs to face Vernon Kennedy, who reported to the Reds an hour before the game after being acquired from the Phillies, scored and the edge gave Passeau an easy workout. He yielded only two singles in the first 6⅔ innings and had his second shutout of the Reds in hand until singles by Eric Tipton, McCormick, and Mesner produced the Red run in the eighth, a juncture at which the Cubs were leading, 7 to 0. Passeau, who won his game here, April 24, with a homer, drove in two runs with an eighth inning double this evening.

Stan Hack opened the first game by caroming a single off Kennedy's glove and Don Johnson lined a single to left. Nicholson's roller went thru McCormick and the bases were thus loaded. Cavarretta singled to right, scoring Hack and Johnson and putting Nicholson on third. Nicholson scored on Pafko's fly but Cavarretta was caught off first Philadelphia, Pa., June 16 (AP)—Knocking out Hank Borowy with a two run attack in the seventh inning, the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the New York Yankees, 4 to 3, before 23,396 tonight.

The tying run came home when Hal Peck doubled behind a walk to George Kell with two out, after Borowy purposely passed Dick Siebert. Bobby Estalella's single scored Peck.

BEN CHAPMAN GOES TO PHILS FOR PEACOCK

Boston, Mass., June 15 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers sent Pitcher Ben Chapman to the Philadelphia Phillies today for Catcher Johnny Peacock in a deal completed less than seven hours before the midnight trade deadline.

Chapman had won three and lost three for the Dodgers after coming up to the club from Richmond in late summer of 1944.

BRAVES TRIM ROSTER

Boston, Mass., June 15 (AP)—The Boston Braves tonight optioned two pitchers to minor league clubs and placed an ailing infielder on the voluntary retired list to get one under the 25 player limit that becomes effective at midnight.

Pitcher Charley Cozart, a left hander with a 1-0 record, was sent to the Rochester International league club, subject to 24 hour recall. Hal Schacker, who has no victories and one defeat, was dropped down to the Braves' Eastern league farm in Hartford, Conn.

READY TO END ARMS OUTPUT IF JAPS GIVE UP

90% Cutback in 48 Hours Planned

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—The army is ready, in the event of a sudden Japanese surrender, to cut back 90 per cent of its contracts within 48 hours, Howard Bruce, director of material, said today.

At a news conference, in which he reported that army procurement will be pared 32 per cent from two front war levels during the last eight months of 1945, he said this probably would be the line up for cutbacks in the case of a sudden Japanese capitulation:

1—Production of munitions such as big guns, etc., will be halted immediately.

2—Contracts for food and subsistence items will be continued, since the army must be maintained for a time.

3—Contracts probably will be continued on new products, involving research and development.

Cut Is Six Billions

The 32 per cent slash in procurement, he said, will amount to 6 billion 100 million dollars—from a projected two front war level of 27 billion 700 million to 21 billion 600 million.

The Sherman M-4 tank, the powerhouse in the army's drive into Germany, is the hardest hit item in the reduction, with production scheduled to be halted completely within two months. Bruce explained that the army already had large quantities of Sherman tanks and the future production would be merely the assembly of parts already made.

Light tank production will be cut 76 per cent from March levels by next December, but the output of the Gen. Pershing medium tank will be stepped up slightly.

Other items which will be cut sharply by December include Garand rifles, 95 per cent; jeeps, 76 per cent; heavy field artillery, 78 per cent; 105 mm. howitzers, 81 per cent, and light-heavy trucks, 75 per cent.

Boost in Incendiaries.

Production of some items, on the other hand, will be given a big boost. Significantly, the production of incendiary bombs—the biggest weapon against Japan now — will be increased 172 per cent over March levels by next December.

Other items, needed in the Pacific war, which will be increased include cotton shirts, 139 per cent; 60 mm. mortar ammunition, 65 per cent; weasels, an amphibious vehicle, 42 per cent, and amphibious "ducks," 63 per cent.

Bruce said that munitions production is now up to satisfactory levels, altho there are a few tight spots in other items, notably wood, textiles, and sheet steel.

Substitute Aluminum

Efforts are being made, he said, to substitute aluminum for those three items. As an example, huts are now being made partly of aluminum instead of sheet steel and cotton duck.

Bruce said that in cutting back army contracts the most important objectives were to relieve tight labor situations in some localities and at the same time to avoid making "ghost towns."

DETROIT AREA'S CUTBACKS CAUSE 80,000 LAY-OFFS

Detroit, Mich., June 15 (AP)—The regional WPB office today reported approximately 80,000 workers have been laid off in the Detroit area since Jan. 1. Nearly 65,000 were dismissed in May.

War contract cutbacks have amounted to 950 million dollars, or slightly less than 20 per cent of the war production in effect at the start of the year.

WHITE MOTOR

I should like information on White Motor company's outlook.—T. I.

Civilian trucks were manufactured in increased quantity by the company last year as its military production declined. This year, company representatives believe, there will be a further large addition to its civilian output which may approach or equal the 1941 volume.

The sales outlook for civilian trucks and buses over the next few years is favored by the deferred demands which have accumulated since early 1942. White Motor's earnings record, however, does not provide a basis for assurance that consistently satisfactory profits can be expected after these needs have been supplied.

In the 1930 decade seven years showed net losses, and in the most profitable year of that period, 1936, the earnings were $1.09 a share on the 625,000 shares. A decidedly better post-war performance apparently would be necessary to sustain the recent price of the stock, above 30, despite the company's strong financial position.

Net income expanded sharply after war started, with per share results as follows: 1940, $3.12; 1941, $4.41; 1942, $4.09; 1943, $4.94; 1944, $3.38. The 1942 earnings, but not 1943 and 1944, are shown after renegotiation. Dividends totaling $1.25 a share in 1941 were the first since 1931. The same dividend rate was continued thru 1942, 1943, and 1944. With no funded debt, net working capital at the end of last year was $21,370,063, equal to more than $34 a share. Total book value exceeded $47.

Sugar Quotas for Industrial Use Slashed

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—The OPA clamped the lid on the sugar bowl even tighter today with sharp reductions in the July-September allotments to industrial users.

The cut gives the biggest segment of commercial users—such as ice cream and bottled beverage producers, bakeries and cereal manufacturers—37½ per cent less sugar than they received in the third quarter of last year.

50 Per Cent of 1941 Supplies

The new grant to these companies is about 23 per cent smaller than they obtained in the current April-June quarter, and is only 50 per cent of their 1941 base period use.

Coming in the wake of cuts in household, restaurant and home canning rations, the industrial reductions are necessary to bring sugar use in line with limited supplies, OPA said.

Commercial canners of fruit also are affected. They will receive an average of 20 per cent less sugar than a year ago.

Faring best were pharmaceutical firms, which take an 8 per cent reduction from April-June.

Price Administrator Bowles said the curtailed allotments mean the end of extra heavy sirup for canned fruits. He added, however, that this will not mean less canned fruit, because lighter sirups can be used.

Some Counties to Get Increase

Altho the general reductions apply everywhere in the country, OPA announced that a small part of the cut will be restored in the case of industrial users serving a few specific counties where there have been population increases.

Industrial users in these counties will receive allocation increases or decreases [figures from the general reduction] because of civilian or military population changes:

Illinois—Fulton, from 10 per cent previously to none; Lake, 15 to 30.

Indiana — Bartholomew, from 20 per cent previously to 30; Clark, 20 to 30; Fayette, none to 10; Lake, none to 10; Porter, none to 10; Vanderburgh, 15 to 20.

Michigan — Bay, from none previously to 10 per cent; Ingham, none to 10; Monroe, none to 10; Wayne, 10 to 15.

Wisconsin—Monroe, from 20 per cent previously to none.

REFUSES TO BAR I.C.C. FROM RICE ELEVATOR CASE

Federal District Judge Igoe yesterday denied a motion for an injunction sought by seven grain elevator companies and the Chicago Board of Trade to restrain the Illinois commerce commission from assuming jurisdiction in a complaint filed before the commission by Daniel F. Rice & Co.

The complaint, filed on July 28, 1944, charged the elevator companies with violation of the state warehouse act and asked the commission to prohibit them from charging alleged unfair and discriminatory rates and other violations of the act.

The companies contended they operate under a federal license and the commission does not have jurisdiction. The board of trade contended it is under the jurisdiction of the commodities and exchange act, subject only to federal regulation.

Igoe held the federal warehouse act of 1916, under which the plaintiffs' sought exemption from ICC jurisdiction, does not purport to be a utility regulatory act. The state has the power to fix reasonable rates and prevent discriminatory rates and protect against improper financial transactions and security issues, Igoe said.

INDUSTRY-WIDE LABOR DEALING HELD PERILOUS

Need Competition, Says WLB Aid

Industry-wide collective bargaining is dangerous and should be "fought and fought hard," Clarence O. Skinner, industrial member of the war labor board, said yesterday. He addressed the closing session of the American Management association's personnel conference in the Palmer House.

There is no reason for a lack of competition in collective bargaining as in anything else, Skinner said.

"I am more and more convinced that industry-wide bargaining is dangerous to get into and almost impossible to get out of once you are in it," he explained.

Trend from Isolationism

E. H. Van Delden, director of industrial relations for Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company, told the meeting that the trend is away from industrial isolationism.

"The probabilities are that employers will be forced into a greater degree of collaboration in collective bargaining than has been known on a wide scale heretofore," he said.

Forces operating to bring about industry-wide bargaining are governmental, union, and logic, he explained.

"The chief government exponent is the war labor board which has appointed commissions, arbitrators, and referees on a national and area industry basis," he said. "According to a former chairman of the board, such commissions 'will inevitably hasten the day of industry wide bargaining'.

WLB Groups Cases

"Moreover separate cases before the board have frequently been grouped together to include all of or part of an industry and have then been accorded the same treatment, regardless of the individual situation."

Business men are interested in the answer to several questions about larger collective bargaining groups, Van Delden said. They wish to know whether they will fare better by uniting to negotiate wage agreements, or whether their interests will be "swallowed up."

"The problem is one of determining just what basis of operations can be worked out which will safeguard the survival and functions of both employers and unions'" he said.

Unions Back Wider Program

"Government agencies and unions are enthusiastically advocating industry-wide collective bargaining and are doing their best to further the trend in that direction.

"As a result business men are naturally suspicious for at least three reasons: [1] When we think of industry-wide collective bargaining, we are apt to think of coal; [2] we are inclined to question whether the interest of the other parties arises solely out of consideration for the welfare of business; [3] we just have not enough facts concerning the operation of such a procedure to know whether it might or might not be desirable."

FARMERS SLASH HOG OFFERINGS; CATTLE STEADY

Hog receipts at the Chicago stock yards yesterday were cut to 8,000 head, only 200 head above the lowest Friday run of the year, and far below requirements of the trade. Buyers bid in the supply at ceiling prices, without regard for sorting, quality, or weights, except when price rules required sorting.

Virtually no price changes occurred in other trades. The cattle run of 2,000 was the largest for a Friday in seven weeks, but offerings were cleared without price change. The best steers brought $17.40, and the bulk $15.50 to $17.25.

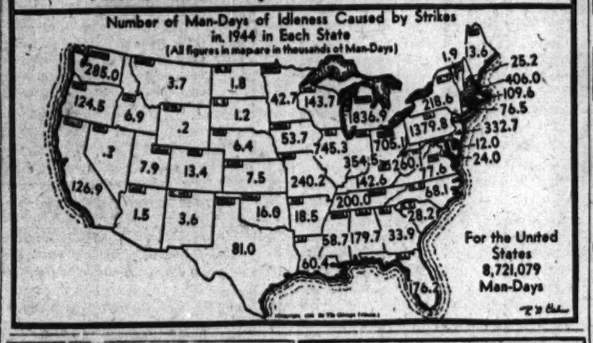
Time Lost by Strikes in 1944

Number of Man-Days of Idleness Caused by Strikes in 1944 in Each State
(All figures in map are in thousands of Man-Days)



Predicts Big Increases in U.S. Spending

Federal government expenditures which averaged 7 billion 800 million dollars a year in the 10 years before the war will be two or three times that after the war, Brig. Gen. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust company, said yesterday in his monthly review of business conditions.

"Each war tends to bring into existence large and permanent increases in the costs of the central government quite aside from the expenses for interest and amortization of the public debt," he said.

Shift to Normal Is Slow

Altho the country has shifted from a two front to a one front war, the economy is mainly military and the shifting toward a normal civilian economy is much less rapid than it appears, he said.

"The cutbacks and terminations of war contracts are real, but altho numerous they are relatively small compared to those which will come into effect before next autumn," he said. "The process of reconversion is under way but it will be slow and accompanied by much unemployment.

"Probably transportation, both by land and by sea, is going to present more difficulties, instead of fewer of them, during this year than it has in the preceding war years. Our railroads, our trucks, and our shipping are going to be taxed to the utmost to meet the requirements."

Labor Forces Grow

Gen. Ayres said in the last five years the labor force in this country has grown more than 10 million.

"Five years ago there were more than 7 million unemployed, but in the first half of this year the number may not average much more than 700,000 or 800,000," he asserted.

WHEAT FUTURES PRICES ADVANCE; RYE RISES AGAIN

Trade interest centered in wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. It closed 1 to 1⅞ cents a bushel higher. Rye again advanced and closed ⅝ to 1⅝ higher. Corn was ⅛ lower to ¼ higher; oats, ⅜ to ⅝ higher, and barley, ⅜ lower to ⅝ higher.

Wheat declined fractions to more than 2 cents early on profit taking and hedging sales. Professional traders tested the selling side of the market early on news additional red wheat was booked for shipment to Chicago July 20 at 4½ over the September futures price.

Wheat was bought on the decline in substantial quantities by a large export house. Traders covered when commission house selling orders failed to materialize. New investment buying developed on unfavorable weather and reports the car situation is not improving.

REPORT U. S. EXPERTS UNEARTH NEW NAZI SECRETS ON RUBBER

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

LONDON, June 15 — German developments in synthetic rubber production uncovered by a special team of technical experts sent with the United States army are so important that half the experts have rushed back to Washington, D. C., with the information they have gathered, it was learned today. Processes which will improve the quality and reduce the cost of synthetic rubber are believed to have been found.

Because reports that the Germans had made notable strides in the production of synthetic rubber were general during the fighting in France, the special group of technicians was organized before the armies crossed into Germany. From then on the group traveled directly behind the spearheads of the American invasion armies. They were under fire constantly, but remained with the troops until the first synthetic rubber plant was captured.

U. S. RUBBER CO. OFFERS PLASTIC FOR UPHOLSTERY

Detroit, Mich., June 15 (AP)—The United States Rubber company today announced a new plastic upholstery for civilian use. Known as naugahyde, the material was described as water and flameproof, and resistant to edge wear, abrasion, scuffing, flexing, and wrinkling.

Officials said the material had been tested in military applications, including seating in such vehicles as combat tanks, trucks, and jeeps.

Wool Top Freeze Eased

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—The WPB today announced it will permit use of mohair and wool top in the production of upholstery fabric for civilian use. The action was taken by exempting from the present "freeze" on production and use of wool top any of that product which contains more than 40 per cent carpet wool or more than 40 per cent mohair.

LARGE OUTPUT BOOST PLANNED FOR CARNEGIE

Continues Pre-War Plant Expansion

In preparation for post-war civilian production, Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation has developed an extensive modernization program for its Chicago and other plants, J. L. Perry, president, said yesterday. Completion will depend upon the availability of materials and man power. The actual cost was not given, but it will run to many millions.

"Our projects are a continuation of the modernization and improvement program carried on by United States Steel corporation subsidiaries during the pre-war depression years," Perry said.

Boost Plate Capacity

One phase of the program is an increase in capacity for cold reduced tin plate in the Chicago and Pittsburgh areas by a total of about 233,000 tons annually. Chicago area capacity will be expanded approximately 104,000 tons annually thru installation of new equipment at the Gary sheet and tin mill. Capacity of the Irvin works at Pittsburgh will be increased about 129,000 tons annually.

Tin plate products are largely taken by the can and container industries. The cold reduced process cuts costs to the consumer and results in a better product.

"This new tin plate improvement is a continuation of the pre-war trend toward improved facilities to meet the change in trade demands from the old style hot reduced to the more modern cold reduced product and is expected to help us more adequately to meet the demands of tin plate users in the post-war period," Perry explained.

Rebuild Gary Furnace

The No. 6 blast furnace at Gary is to be rebuilt and enlarged from a daily rated capacity of 870 tons to 1,508. The furnace was built in 1910 and was last completely relined in 1928. Improvements will include new stoves and other adjuncts.

At the South Works the No. 7 and No. 9 blast furnaces will be completely rebuilt and enlarged and the ore and coke pockets at blast furnaces numbers 5 to 10, inclusive, will be replaced. No. 7 blast furnace, built in 1910, has a rated capacity of 676 tons a day and No. 9, built in 1909, of 713. After rebuilding, each of these furnaces will have a rated capacity of 1,508 tons a day.

QUOTAS HELD 'TOO LOW'

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—The senate small business committee's staff today expressed belief that insufficient steel will be allowed for civilian production in the third quarter of this year. The margins "present a danger to small business," said Dewey Anderson, executive secretary.

Anderson presented the staff's report as the committee began hearings on reconversion problems of small business. He said the condition in steel is matched by other materials, components, and parts, and added, "The committee staff believes that action to correct this situation must be taken immediately."

C. A. & E. Gets to Aug. 15 to File Reorganization

Federal District Judge Barnes yesterday gave Arthur L. Schwartz, trustee of the Chicago Aurora and Elgin Railroad company until Aug. 15 to file a plan for reorganization of the company in bankruptcy proceedings under chapter 10 of the Chandler act. The line has been in equity receivership since July 21, 1932.

Better Service to Be Provided by Greyhound

An estimated 35 million dollars will be spent by Greyhound corporation and its subsidiary bus lines for a post-war improvement program providing better equipment and more comfortable and attractive terminal facilities, the company said yesterday.

It has on order 568 "Victory type" coaches, costing approximately $13,000 each, for delivery as soon as the manufacturers produce them.

Orders Cruiser Coaches

Also on order are between 200 and 300 so-called cruiser coaches costing between $20,000 and $25,000 each, depending on whether air conditioning units and other improvements will be available at the time of manufacture. Delivery is expected after the defeat of Japan, or sooner if priorities permit.

Others, which are in the development stage and have not yet been priced, will include washroom facilities and snack bars and are projected for transcontinental travel.

Plan Terminal Expansion

Terminal improvement and expansion will be undertaken in large cities as well as small communities and will cost an estimated 20 million dollars. Some new facilities will be built and others will be modernized.

Other post-war plans include faster and more frequent service, development of the all-expense tour business, and expansion of Greyhound Post houses. There are 54 of these restaurants in operation in 18 states, and the company contemplates more of a new type to cater to automobile tourists as well as bus patrons.

Seize Transit Line in East, ODT Ordered

Washington, D. C., June 15 (AP)—President Truman today directed the office of defense transportation to seize and operate the Scranton Transit company, Scranton, Pa., as a result of labor disturbances there.

The President issued an executive order proclaiming that the disturbances were threatening to impede the war program. Later ODT announced it would take possession and control of the transit company property at 12:01 a. m. tomorrow.

[A few minutes before the time set for seizure the workers voted to end the strike.]

Federal Manager Named

The agency named T. H. Nicholl, executive assistant of ODT's highway transport department, as federal manager in charge of operating the system.

Brig. Gen. C. D. Young, deputy director of ODT, said he had requested War Secretary Stimson "to set in motion the machinery necessary to provide any military protection for equipment or operators that may be required to restore service."

Service Is Interrupted

Economic Stabilizer Davis said the line's operation is halted as a result of a dispute between division 168, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America [AFL], and the company.

He added that 400 union employes of the company have been on strike since May 20, 1945 over union demands for changes in working conditions and overtime pay and a 20 cents per hour general wage increase.

Burlington Rents Chicken Farm to Supply Diners

The Burlington railroad has leased a modern chicken farm near Lincoln, Neb., where it plans to produce 30,000 or more birds a year to augment the restricted food supplies available for its passengers, Edward Flynn, executive vice president, announced yesterday. Present dining car requirements average about 100,000 chickens a year, but this quantity has been impossible to obtain.
